

Israel's leading electronic daily rated 6th news site in the world
<http://www.jpost.co.il>
THE JERUSALEM POST INTERNET EDITION IS WAITING FOR YOU!

THE JERUSALEM POST

Make international connections
From Israel, just dial:
177-100-2727
AT&T

VOLUME LXXI NUMBER 2632 TUESDAY, MAR 27, 1997 - YAR 20, 5757 • 20 MOHARRAM 1418 NIS 4.50 (Eilat NIS 3.80)

Hapoel Beersheba wins State Cup
Page 10

Bobby McFerrin improvises
Arts & Entertainment, Page 7

Turkish generals pressure Erbakan
Page 5

Index

- Arts & Entertainment . . . 7
- Business . . . 8
- Crossword . . . 11
- Movies/TV . . . 11
- Opinion . . . 6
- Sports . . . 10

Indyk: US ready for dialogue with Iran

By DAVID RUDGE

The US is ready for a dialogue with Iran, particularly if the results of the recent elections represent a change in its hitherto radical policy, US Ambassador Martin Indyk said yesterday.

He stressed, however, that it is still too early to say whether the election of Mohammed Khatami as president indicates a moderating of Iran's previously radical stance.

"The US has made it clear repeatedly that we have nothing against the Islamic government in Iran," he said, prior to being presented with the Haifa University's humanitarian award of merit. He was cited for his commitment and contribution to furthering the peace process and strengthening ties between Israel and the US.

"It's Iran's behavior, particularly its opposition to the peace process, its support for terrorism, and its attempts to acquire weapons of mass destruction - nuclear weapons and long-range missiles - it's those kinds of activities which are of concern to us.

"We have said before that we are ready for a dialogue with the government of Iran. That has been our long-standing position and there's nothing new in that.

"But, beyond that, we will have to wait and see whether the election of President Khatami represents an interest on the part of Iran in changing the behavior that is so troubling to us. If that in fact is the case, then I think we would welcome that."

Indyk also spoke about moving forward the peace process with Syria.

"Certainly our objective is to achieve a comprehensive peace, which means not just a peace agreement between Israel and the Palestinians, but also agreements between Israel, Syria and Lebanon," he said.

"It is very much in our interest, therefore, to see that process move forward, and I think we share that view with both Israel and Syria.

"The problem is how to do it and that is proving very difficult, but we will continue to work on this. Syria continues to express an interest in resuming the negotiations, as does Israel.

"I hope that if we can succeed in getting the Palestinian process back on track, we will also succeed in getting the Syrian and Lebanese negotiations restarted as well," he said.

Indyk issued a clear warning that the peace process will move backward and all achievements made so far will be undermined if no progress is made.

"We are concerned about that and we are sending out a warning signal about that, but we are also saying that the parties have to recognize their responsibilities," he said.

On the Mubarak-Netanyahu summit he said, "I think it is very important that President Mubarak has decided to step in at this moment and lend his good offices to try and put this process back on track.

"We are in close contact with Egypt and Israel about this initiative and as I have said before we will be ready to re-engage to follow it up," Indyk said, "but I emphasize again that we cannot do it for the parties. They are the ones that have to take the initiative.

"Egypt has a very important role to play both as the country that first made peace with Israel and led the Arab world to peace with Israel and as the most important and influential country in the Arab world," he said.

Cable TV providers refusing to hook up some areas

By JUDY SEGEL

Cable TV companies are demanding tens of thousands of shekels from would-be subscribers in urban and outlying areas or are completely refusing to supply service, even though they are required by law to connect all those who ask for the service.

Zvi Hauser, an adviser to Communications Minister Limor Livnat, said last night that the ministry has recognized the matter as serious and deserving of attention.

"We're spending much effort to find ways to resolve the problem," he said. "One of the answers would be the supply of multi-channel TV to everyone via satellite, in competition with the cable companies. Such a possibility has been approved in principle by the government, but its implementation will require legislation."

Among those whose applications for cable service have been rejected or conditioned on the "sharing" of expenses are residents of predominantly haredi areas or Arab villages - and big-city firms like Channel 2 and The Jerusalem Post.

Arutzei Zahav, the monopoly supplying cable service in the Jerusalem area, has demanded NIS 16,000 from Channel 2, located on Rehov Kanfei Nesharian, near its Jerusalem building. The Jerusalem Post, situated a block away from Bezeq headquarters and three blocks from Channel 1 and Israel Radio (which have cable), has been asked to pay NIS 22,583 to get hooked up.

It argued that the Post's neighborhood is a combined industrial and increasingly haredi residential area where demand is negligible.

Huli Raz, Arutzei Zahav's Jerusalem regional director, asked the Communications Ministry's exceptions committee (re-established two years ago) to approve the special fees. Chairman Hanan Elstein turned down these requests, saying they were unreasonable.

National religious and secular residents of Jerusalem's Beit Yehon, Har Nof, city center, and Rehov Bar-Ilan areas have also been turned down, because only a handful of people have requested cable.

Michael Raphaeli, chairman of the Israel Cable Council, said it is highly unreasonable for cable companies to demand extraordinary fees for hooking up individuals in urban areas.

Would-be customers could sue the cable companies, but such suits could take years.

In the meantime, the solution could be the provision of multi-channel television by satellite.

"The cable companies themselves want exclusive rights to provide the channels to subscribers in peripheral areas via satellite, but we want other companies to do this and introduce competition," Raphaeli insisted.

Moshe Ronen, managing director of Arutzei Zahav, did not respond to a request for a comment.

IDF pays tribute
Chief of Staff Lt-Gen. Amnon Lipkin-Shahak (left) and Brig.-Gen. Shmuel Zucker lay a wreath yesterday at the former Bergen-Belsen concentration camp.

France's Juppe to resign soon

News agencies

PARIS - French Prime Minister Alain Juppe said yesterday he would resign whatever the outcome of next Sunday's parliamentary election runoff. President Jacques Chirac will make a radio and television broadcast to the nation tonight, his office announced immediately after Juppe's statement.

Juppe made his decision after the Socialist-led opposition strongly outpolled his center-right coalition in Sunday's first round of voting, raising the prospect of an upset left-wing victory in the decisive second round.

Juppe's record unpopularity among voters, combined with record unemployment, made him the left's biggest target and the first fall guy in the election.

As Chirac's loyal lieutenant,

Alain Juppe

Juppe dutifully carried out the belt-tightening policies - his boss called for, while he struggled with strikes, social unrest, scandals, and dismal poll ratings.

After the first-round vote in which the left stunned the right by taking the lead, Chirac and Juppe agreed it was time to rob the left of its chief target before the runoff. Juppe had to go.

While a brilliant technocrat, Juppe, 51, had trouble winning the hearts of the French with his book-aloof style. He became the most unpopular prime minister since the 1950s, with an approval rating dipping as low as 21 percent.

That weakened his hand in pushing through austerity reforms aimed at cutting France's budget deficit to match criteria to enter a European single currency, the euro, by 1999.

The so-called "Juppe Plan" to streamline France's costly public welfare system sparked a wave of strikes that brought much of France to a halt in late 1995 and have persisted on and off since that time.

Juppe promised the French a "new beginning," including a new jobs for the millions of unemployed, when he was appointed premier by Chirac in May 1995.

Two years later, he talked of "real change," while the jobless rate hovered at a post-war record 12.8 percent. The opposition has not let that fact slip by unremarked.

He has also been undermined by personal corruption scandals.

The media revealed that his son was living in a city-owned apartment for exceptionally low rent and that he had renovated his own apartment on council expenses when he was Paris finance director from 1989-1993. Both son and prime minister were forced to move houses after a public outcry in 1995.

of some compromise that would enable jump-starting the stalled peace process, they said.

They pointed to the fact that Mubarak's adviser, Osama el-Baz, remained in Israel for a second day yesterday, meeting with Foreign Minister David Levy and Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai, as an indication that some kind of agreement was reached.

Channel 1 reported last night that Netanyahu will demand a meeting with Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat at today's summit.

As part of the preparations for the summit, a source said, Steve Cohen, president of the Montreal-based Institute for Middle East Peace, has been shuttling between Cairo and Jerusalem, delivering messages between the two leaders.

An Israeli advance team went to Sharm el-Sheikh's Movenpick Hotel yesterday to complete the preparations for the summit, which has expanded to include Levy and possibly his Egyptian counterpart, Amr Moussa. Netanyahu held intensive consultations with Levy and Mordechai, after which the latter said he is not aware Israel was requested to make any gesture toward the Palestinians.

See SUMMIT, Page 2

PA official: Israel lacing gum with aphrodisiac

By JON IMMANUEL

Israel is sending chewing gum laced with aphrodisiacs to the Palestinian Authority, a PA official charged in a daily newspaper yesterday.

Saleh Abdulfat, director of the inspection department of the PA Ministry of Supplies, said that laboratory tests made on seven brands of Israeli gum smuggled into the West Bank and Gaza showed they contain a sexually stimulating adrenaline substance.

Havei al-Jazeera, the newspaper closest to PA Chairman Yasser Arafat, quoted Abdulfat as saying some wholesalers have been arrested and may be tried for bringing the gum and a spoiled food into PA-controlled territory.

"If these allegations were not so ridiculous, they would be very funny," Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's spokesman Shai Barak said last night.

The charge that Israel manufactured and exported sexually stimulating gum first surfaced among Islamic militants in Egypt 140 years ago. The stories became the basis for accusations in the Cairo press that Israel was exporting its depraved moral standards to Egypt to weaken its youth.

In February, the Supplies Ministry was the focus of the most serious scandal to be made public since the PA took office. It involved the sale of flour which had passed its expiry date with fake stamps indicating it was fresh. The flour was allegedly repackaged in Israel.

Journalist probed under warning

Channel 1 commentator Amnon Abramovitch was questioned under caution by police yesterday, after he declined to reveal his source for the story that Avishai Raviv was a General Security Service agent.

Abramovitch, who revealed his questioning on Channel 1's Mabar news last night, said the investigation was begun several months ago.

"During the investigation, staffers at the Justice Ministry, State Attorney's Office, GSS, and police were questioned," he said. "I was questioned twice and this morning I was questioned under caution."

No-confidence motions fail

By LIAT COLLINS

Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu survived two no-confidence motions by a vote of 34-47 yesterday, with an abstention by Benny Elon (Moleket).

Labor filed a motion on the breakdown of the peace process and what it described as the isolation of Israel in the international arena. Meretz and Hadash added to the crisis in the local authorities.

Shlomo Ben-Ami, a candidate for the Labor Party leadership, presented his faction's motion with a scorching attack on Netanyahu. He said there is only a small chance of success for today's summit between Netanyahu and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and said the country is, in effect, leaderless.

"Instead of a prime minister, we have a media man who chases after every possible media effect wherever he can appear in the press," Ben-Ami said. "There's no strategy. No peace policy. And no social policy. It's a government of continuing incitement against the rule of good public administration and law."

Communications Minister Limor Livnat, who answered for the government, said the summit would take place as planned, without any preconditions. "We believe this is the first step in the resumption of the diplomatic of some compromise that would enable jump-starting the stalled peace process, they said.

PM: No Har Homa deals

They pointed to the fact that Mubarak's adviser, Osama el-Baz, remained in Israel for a second day yesterday, meeting with Foreign Minister David Levy and Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai, as an indication that some kind of agreement was reached.

Channel 1 reported last night that Netanyahu will demand a meeting with Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat at today's summit.

As part of the preparations for the summit, a source said, Steve Cohen, president of the Montreal-based Institute for Middle East Peace, has been shuttling between Cairo and Jerusalem, delivering messages between the two leaders.

An Israeli advance team went to Sharm el-Sheikh's Movenpick Hotel yesterday to complete the preparations for the summit, which has expanded to include Levy and possibly his Egyptian counterpart, Amr Moussa. Netanyahu held intensive consultations with Levy and Mordechai, after which the latter said he is not aware Israel was requested to make any gesture toward the Palestinians.

مكتبة الاصل

Knesset blasts haredi flag burning

By LIAT COLLINS

Knesset Speaker Dan Tichon opened yesterday's plenum session by condemning the flag burning by haredim on Lag Ba'omer.

few are becoming a phenomenon, and if we don't wake up and issue a warning now and get rid of this phenomenon, we could find that we have woken up too late.

The plenum heard several urgent motions to the agenda on the subject. Shas leader Aryeh Deri, in an unusual appearance in the plenum, said he was "embarrassed and ashamed" by the flag burning and the Remembrance Day incidents.

been set up to investigate the flag burning and is expected to find the offenders within a few weeks. He noted that after the Remembrance Day events a delegation of haredim came to him to apologize on behalf of the community and to promise to help find the guilty.

Palestinian human rights group attacks PA

By JON IMMANUEL

A Palestinian human rights group yesterday accused the Palestinian Authority of human rights violations and introduced relatives of some of the victims at a press conference.

man was killed by an IDF undercover unit.

One of the arrested men reported to relatives that during three months of interrogation, "they forced my head into a toilet and forced me to drink from it."

Another was stripped naked in the office of Col. Washidi, of Bethlehem military intelligence, "where they tried to rape me, but my screams prevented them. They inserted a baton into my rectum. At that moment I signed the confession."

PA Attorney-General Khalid al-Qidrah responded to the report on Israel Radio's Arabic service. He denied there is systematic torture, "only individual acts," and accused Eid of "lies."

Jerusalem's Jewish growth rate dropping

By ELLI WOHLGELERITER

Slowly but steadily, the overall rate of growth of the Jewish population in Jerusalem is decreasing each year, and projection statistics published yesterday indicate that by the year 2010, the Arab population in the city will be 31 percent.

The overall population in Jerusalem at the end of 1996 stood at 603,000, of which 422,300, or 70%, were Jews. The overall population grew 139% since the Six Day War, with Jews growing by 114%, and Arabs by 163%.

Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert reviews the Jerusalem Institute for Israeli Studies' annual 'Statistical Yearbook' with the help of its editor, Dr. Maya Choshen, at a press conference yesterday.

These and many other facts and figures on the city were released yesterday by the Jerusalem Institute for Israeli Studies, in its annual 'Statistical Yearbook'.

Projected figures for the year 2010 show a population of 817,000, with 251,000 Arabs and 214,000 haredim. The haredim will make up 38% of the Jewish population, and 26% of the overall population.

There is a danger that the changing proportions of Jews and Arabs in this city will add to the already strained relations between the two groups, and this worries me," he said at a news conference.

55% of the city's population lived in areas that were added to the city after the 1967 war, and of this group 48% are Jews.

Although the statistics show, not surprisingly, an increase in the birth rate of haredi families, Olmert said that projected figures estimate "that in the year 2010, over 62% of the Jewish population will be non-haredi, which is assuring that the days when the haredim will take over the city of Jerusalem are far off. Of course it will depend on the number of new immigrants that will come to Jerusalem, which will affect the proportions. Jerusalem has apparently lost far more among new immigrants, however. Only 5,000 who came here in 1995 chose to live in Jerusalem, compared with 8,000 in 1991. If that trend continues, then the demographic trend can best be seen in the classroom: There are 156,000 schoolchildren in the city, with 50% in grades 1-6 studying in haredi institutions. Among kindergarten pupils, 61% are haredi.

number of people leaving the city of Jerusalem. This is encouraging, and reflects the efforts we are making to stop the immigration out of the city. Jerusalem is also a poor city, with 37% of the children living below the poverty line in 1995, compared with 23.2% for all of Israel. 16.8% in Tel Aviv, 13.1% in Petah Tikva and 46.1% in Bnei Brak.

IAF hits terrorists in south Lebanon

Hizbullah shells SLA position

By DAVID RUDGE

The IAF blasted Hizbullah targets in south Lebanon yesterday, following a roadside bomb attack in which two South Lebanese Army soldiers were wounded.

Reports from Lebanon said the planes fired a number of rockets at Hizbullah targets. There were no immediate reports of any Hizbullah casualties. In a separate incident yesterday evening, Hizbullah gunmen fired several mortar rounds at a SLA position in the western sector of the security zone. There were no casualties and IDF and gunners returned fire.

Three killed on roads

One person was killed and two were injured - one seriously, the other moderately - in an accident near Mishor Adumim last night. The injured were taken to Jerusalem's Hadassah University Hospital at Ein Kerem.

Haifa airport yesterday afternoon. On Tuesday night, an eight-year-old Majd el-Kurum boy was killed when he ran across a street at the entrance to the village and was hit by a car.

With deep sorrow we announce the passing on May 24, 1997, after a long illness, of my wife, our mother and grandmother

GRETL MIRIAM BLOCH

The funeral took place on Sunday, May 25, in Rehovot.

Her husband, Herbert Daughter, Dina and Yossi Steinmetz Grandchildren, Ronen and Hana Steinmetz
Yuvai and Rinat Steinmetz
Great-grandchildren, Tomer and Eyal

Shiva at 58 Rehov Edmond Fleg, Haifa

Our beloved

MAX (Michael) HANDELSMAN

has passed away.

The funeral will take place today, Tuesday, May 27, 1997, at 11:00 a.m., leaving from the Kehilat Yerushalayim funeral parlor, Jerusalem, (opposite Herzog hospital), for the Givat Shaul cemetery.

A bus will leave from Migdalei Hayam Hatichon, Bat Yam at 9:30 a.m.

The family

We mourn the passing of

HAROLD PHILIP LABANDTER

The funeral took place yesterday, May 26, 1997 in Ra'anana.

His wife, daughter and sons

SUMMIT

Continued from Page 1

Netanyahu's entourage will include his political advisers Uri Arad and Dore Gold, who is also UN ambassador-designate, senior policy adviser David Ben-Gurion, cabinet secretary Danny Navon, and attorney Yitzhak Molcho.

Netanyahu and Mubarak are scheduled to meet at the hotel at 11 a.m., give a joint press conference at about 1 p.m., then have lunch together.

Asked whether the summit might result in a construction freeze at Har Homa, Olmert said, "The answer is definitely no. We will not agree under any condition to matter what. The building in Har Homa will continue. It is unstoppable."

Jewish settlers fear Netanyahu may agree to freezing the expansion of settlements in order to resume the peace talks. Yehiel Leiter of the Council of Jewish Communities in Judea, Samaria, and Gaza, said settlement leaders believe Netanyahu will not agree to a freeze. "If he does, there will be no coalition," he said.

In an interview on Arutz 7, Madalet Party leader Rehavim Zelev said he is disappointed in Netanyahu, because he has not been able to withstand Palestinian demands. "After keeping track of the prime minister for the past year," he said, "I know that basically he is good at making speeches and flexing muscles, but when it comes down to it, he gives in."

Zelev added he is pessimistic about the summit, but he thinks it will lead to further negotiations. He also criticized the fact that when meeting with Mubarak, Israeli prime ministers are always made to travel to Egypt. "Why can't the meeting be held in Israel?" he asked. "If Mubarak wants to come to Jerusalem, then why not meet in Nitzana or BeerSheva?"

By agreeing to meet on Egyptian soil, the government starts out in an inferior position, he said.

Liav Collins, Elli Wohlgeleitner, and Margot Dudkevitch contributed to this report.

NEWSLINE

With Dr. Yoram Meital, of Ben-Gurion University, an expert on Egyptian affairs

By DAVID RUDGE

What is Egypt trying to achieve by initiating this summit meeting between President Hosni Mubarak and Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu?

The Egyptian initiative is taking place against the background of the deep freeze in the peace process. The aim is to try to create a new momentum which will help break the ice and, hopefully, restart the process by talking at the highest levels, as well as at the working level between the respective Egyptian, Palestinian, and Israeli advisers. They are doing this although there are many in Egypt who believe that the present Israeli government prefers maintaining the status quo, which amounts to a freeze.

Is Egypt stepping into the vacuum created by the deadlock in the peace process and what has been viewed as ineffectual US efforts to get the sides back to the negotiating table?

The Egyptians are trying to present this initiative as an alternative to the non-existent talks, and as an alternative to the indecisive shuttle diplomacy of US mediators. It is also an alternative to what is happening in the Arab arena, particularly the efforts by Syria to call for an Arab summit at which it would like to see tough decisions taken against any normalization of ties between Israel and Arab countries.

The Egyptians are saying that it is not the right time to convene an Arab summit, nor to start playing hard ball with Israel.

Is this also an attempt to negate recent Israeli statements about Egypt's negative role in the peace process?

The Egyptians are also trying to appeal to public opinion in the US and the West generally, as well as in Israel. They believe that this initiative by President Mubarak should be perceived by all as proof of the positive role that Egypt is playing in the peace process.

The Egyptians have been listening closely to the comments coming from the government here. Now they are saying to Israelis and the world in general that they are committed to the peace process and that they are trying to be supportive.

Why is Egypt adopting this stance, given internal opposition to the peace accord with Israel, which has apparently grown because of the deadlock, as well as the attitude of other some other Arab countries, particularly Syria?

The Egyptians have come to the conclusion that the present Israeli government will serve out its full term and that this is the government they have to work with. It should be understood that Egypt has a lot to lose if the peace process were to remain deadlocked or fail completely.

What are Egypt's expectations from the summit?

They would like to see this summit as a first step of what could develop into another chain of steps to rescue the peace process. They expect the summit to create a new atmosphere, leading to substantive talks between the parties. They would also expect to hear some commitment from Israel, and afterward from the Palestinians, to continue the peace process on the basis of what has already been agreed.

Thirdly, if these points are fulfilled, they would hope that the new atmosphere would enable the parties to resume negotiations over final status arrangements. I don't think they will go into details or even mention Har Homa or the settlements, for instance, in any joint statement that is issued after the summit. This is why more detailed issues, including the building at Har Homa, have not been put on the agenda.

What would happen if the summit fails to achieve any of the somewhat moderate aims set by the Egyptians?

I would be surprised if these minimal aims would not be met. All of the sides are aware of the dangers if the meeting ends with absolutely nothing or a negative image. In such circumstances, there would be a danger of the peace process deteriorating even further. In such a case, the pressure from Egyptian public opinion and that of the Arab world to adopt a tougher stance against Israel would much more difficult for the Egyptian government to ignore.

DRIVE CAREFULLY

HAR HABAYTI - Who Will Prevail?
Moslems from the banners of Yassas and the mosques in Damascus, Catholic diplomats from the Vatican in Rome vie with young Israelis and the Mofetz to gain control of THE AGREEMENT.

Wiesenthal Center to host restitution claims parley

By TOM TUGEND

LOS ANGELES - The Simon Wiesenthal Center has invited senior officials and experts from 15 countries to a three-day conference in Geneva to address worldwide restitution claims by the victims of Nazism.

The conference theme of "Property and Restitution: A Moral Responsibility to History" will be discussed June 23-25 from the historical, political, legal and moral perspectives. About 150-200 participants are expected.

"We have now a window of opportunity to deal with these issues on a global basis," said Rabbi Abraham Cooper, associate dean of the Wiesenthal Center. "The international character of this conference will indicate that responsibility for restitution extends well beyond Switzerland." Invitations have been extended to the foreign ministers of Switzerland, Britain, Israel and Argentina to address the opening session on the responsibility of political leaders toward victims of Nazism. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato (R-NY), who has spearheaded Senate hearings on Nazi gold and Jewish accounts held by Swiss banks, will participate.

Investigative writers and historians from Argentina, France, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Switzerland and Turkey are to present "A Global Report Card" on restitution issues affecting their countries.

Naphtali Lavie, vice-chairman of the Israel-based World Jewish Restitution Organization (WJRO), will speak on the overall Jewish perspective. Emrys Davies, secretary-general of the Tripartite Commission for the Restitution of Monetary Gold, founded in 1946 by the United States, Britain and France, will give an overview of the commission's work.

The fate and possible recovery of paintings and other art works looted by the Nazis will be discussed by experts from the United States, France, Holland, Germany and Belgium.

Switzerland's Catholic Bishop Armande Grab and Chief Rabbi Alexandre Safran of Geneva will weigh the spiritual and moral dimensions of restitution.

Veteran Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal will close the conference with an address on "Memory as the Key to the Future."

In Herzog's memory
Foreign Minister David Levy (left), Aura Herzog, Sen. Daniel Moynihan (left rear) and Ben-Gurion University president Avishai Braverman pose yesterday at the dedication of the university's Chaim Herzog Center for Middle Eastern and Diplomatic Research, named in memory of the country's sixth president.

ANALYSIS

Eizenstat Report: Questions, but few answers

By MARILYN HENRY

NEW YORK - The other shoe dropped last week when Switzerland issued its formal response to the long-awaited American report on Nazi gold. In a seven-page declaration, the Swiss Federal Council expressed irritation that the US went beyond mere history and into "political and moral values" in its review of the Reich's financial dealings.

It was last summer when the US first alluded to such a review. "Just as Switzerland may have to undergo some painful examination about its [war-time] role, so too will the US government," Stuart Eizenstat, the lead US official on property restitution, said last August in Jerusalem. In the months since, there have been frenzied expectations about what the Eizenstat Report would expose and who would benefit from the revelations.

The report was released on May 7; Bern reacted last Thursday. But neither the report nor the reactions say much about how nations proceed from here.

When they discuss Nazi gold, Switzerland and the US are dissecting the Washington Agreement, an accord they reached a half-century ago. The two have been rehashing old issues - whether the Swiss turned over appropriate amounts of Nazi loot and whether, as the Reich's bankers, they profited and prolonged Germany's ability to wage war by trading with it.

There have been some recent calls for Switzerland and the Allies to renegotiate the 1946 Washington Agreement, though neither side has shown itself willing to do so. In Congress and within Jewish organizations, there has been a strong sentiment, 50 years after the fact, that the US made a bad deal in accepting $58 million from Switzerland to settle the Nazi gold question. Some of the agitation implies that a better deal would have benefited the Jews, but there is no firm evidence of that.

Washington and Bern also are engaged in an ideological debate about neutrality. Five decades ago, the Allies did not question Swiss neutrality.

Instead, they said they were "cognizant" of Switzerland's difficult position during the war, according to the US report, which was compiled by 11 federal agencies. Now, however, Eizenstat essentially has said Swiss neutrality was an immoral choice - a view the Swiss dispute.

For the US, the Eizenstat report was something of a mea culpa. "With greater support and interest from Allied leadership, it might have been possible to strike a better bargain on the looted gold and other German assets in neutral countries," the report said.

After surviving Hitler, the victims then suffered from "the sad combination of indifference on the part of neutrals and inaction on the part of the Allies," said Eizenstat, who is now undersecretary of state-designate.

Switzerland, increasingly testy, says it is making amends with a historical review and a humanitarian fund for needy survivors. It also plans to allot aid to survivors from a "solidarity fund" that would be financed with income from Switzerland's gold reserves. However, the prospect of that fund had not been able to sustain popular Swiss support.

Although it made a public atonement, the US has not indicated its intent or resolve to rectify its "inaction." Nor is there any hint that Americans are in a hurry, although Eizenstat's recent public appearances routinely appeal for assistance for survivors, especially those in Eastern Europe.

Eizenstat has called for a "substantial portion" of the $70 million in so-called residual gold to be used for the victims of Nazi atrocities. That gold, held by the Tripartite

Gold Commission, technically must be used as restitution to the states whose central banks were raided by the Nazis. An international conference later this year in London may address that issue.

If that prospect succeeds, it comes a half-century after the Allies failed to press strenuously for funds for refugee relief. At war's end, they targeted only $25 million for refugee aid, while they amassed more than $330 million in Nazi loot - in 1946 values - for restitution to the European banks that had been plundered by Germany.

The tripartite commission began distributing gold in October 1947, and by mid-1948, it had disbursed $295 million. By contrast, in April 1949, the International Refugee Organization announced in Geneva that it had distributed $15.3 million to help victims of Nazi persecution. Of that, $9.8 million went to the Jewish Agency, and $5.2 million to the Joint Distribution Committee.

In the meantime, the US has not made a strenuous commitment to review its post-war decision to settle claims for heirless war-era Jewish assets in the US for $500,000, although at least $6 million - in 1945 dollars - in unclaimed American bank deposits may have belonged to Jews killed in the Holocaust.

Iranian: Iraq wanted joint attack on Israel in Gulf War

TEHRAN (AP) - It was one of the mysteries of the 1990-91 Gulf crisis: Why did Iraq send the bulk of its warplanes to Iran? US-led allied commanders and Middle East experts at the time believed it was to keep the jets safe from the allied bombardment of Iraq.

But a senior Iranian official said yesterday that it was part of a desperate plan by Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein to draw Iran into a joint attack on Israel.

Had such an attack been carried out, it could have changed the course of the conflict, said the Foreign Ministry official.

The official disclosed that Izzat Ibrahim, the vice chairman of Iraq's Revolutionary Command Council, said in a letter to Iran that there would never be a better time to attack Israel and get rid of it forever.

The letter, addressed to President Hashemi Rafsanjani, placed the Iraqi warplanes and pilots under full Iranian command, he said. "Iran turned down the plan because it was not in its national interests," the official said in an interview.

Allied officers estimated that about 90 Iraqi warplanes were moved to Iran.

Iraq said it sent 115 military aircraft and some civilian airliners. Iran has said it received just 22 planes, some of them plundered by Iraq from Kuwait.

Ahmed Daqamsa (Reuters file photo)

Naharayim killer goes on trial today

AMMAN (Reuters) - A Jordanian soldier who shot dead seven Beit Shemesh schoolgirls at a Jordan Valley border post goes on trial for his life in a military court here today charged with premeditated murder.

Army driver Ahmed Daqamsa, 26, emptied three rifle clips at the teenage girls as they visited the Island of Peace at Naharayim, on March 13.

Daqamsa, who faces the gallows if found guilty, confessed to the shooting but said he had reacted impulsively when the girls teased him while he prayed, his lawyer Ahmed Nijdawi said.

"He admitted that he opened fire. But it was not planned," Nijdawi told Reuters.

King Hussein made condolence visits to the families of the girls, aged 13 and 14, and said Daqamsa should have been shot dead on the spot by his army comrades.

But while government officials condemned the killing as a vile and criminal act, Jordan's vocal peace critics have said Daqamsa's motives were patriotic.

"People feel he is not guilty, that he is a national hero," Nijdawi said. Daqamsa will face a panel of five military judges at an army base near Naqur, a few kilometers south of Amman.

Nijdawi said the court would read out the charges of premeditated killing, attempt to kill, and military desertion. Daqamsa would enter a plea and the trial would probably adjourn for a few days before witnesses are called. "He will tell the court he is not guilty," Nijdawi said.

He said the charge sheet states that Daqamsa had planned to kill Israelis in the past, but held back. On the day of the shooting he left alone the first group of Israelis who visited Naharayim, because they were under 10 years old, it said.

Oscar Wilde & Peter Hall at the Israel Festival, Jerusalem

An Ideal Husband

A comedy by Oscar Wilde

"Deliriously funny! A gleaming production." The New York Times
"... far superior to almost every Wildean production of recent years." The Financial Times

The play is in English
With the assistance of the British Council

CORIOLANUS
By William Shakespeare
Directed by and starring Steven Berkoff
Rebecca Crown Amphitheatre
May 29 at 8:00 p.m.
May 30 at 11:00 a.m.
June 1 at 9:00 p.m.

ANIMAL FARM
By George Orwell
Directed by Alan Lightland
Rebecca Crown Amphitheatre
June 7 at 9:30 p.m.
June 8, 9 at 8:30 p.m.
In response to public demand an additional show on
June 9 at 2:30 p.m.
June 10 at 2:00 p.m.

Sherover Theatre
May 29 at 9:00 p.m.
May 30 at 3:00 p.m.
May 31 at 9:00 p.m.
June 1 at 9:00 p.m.
In response to public demand an additional show on
June 1 at 4:00 p.m.

The plays are in English
To receive a full list of events dial
02-6294499
Central box office for sales and distribution:
Bunat Tel 02-6243846, Khamis 02-6358866; other ticket offices and the Jerusalem Theatre box office

Ben-Gurion University of the Negev
The 27th Board of Governors Meeting
Events taking place on Tuesday, May 27, 1997
Dedication Ceremony of the Els Wyler Center for the Peaceful Utilization of Natural Resources in the presence of Els and Martin Wyler, Switzerland with the participation of Robert H. Arnow, Chairman Emeritus of the Board of Governors
Yuval Rabin
Ceremony marking the Cornerstone-laying and Establishment of the Albert Katz International School for Desert Studies in the presence of Ilse Katz, Switzerland
Guest of Honor: Shimon Peres
Ceremony of the Conferment of Honorary Doctoral Degrees upon:
Ruth Dayan, Israel
Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan, USA
Dr. Ferdinand Piëch, Germany
Prof. Howard Raiffa, USA
Prof. Zvi Yavetz, Israel
Presentation of the Lifetime Achievement Award to Ilse Katz, Switzerland in the presence of Ezer Weizman, President of the State of Israel, and his wife, Reuma
For further details, please contact the Department of Public Affairs, Tel: 07-6461279

...stinian
... rights
... attacks

...stinians lost
... peace process

NEWS

in brief

Couple get prison terms for child abuse

A Beersheba couple were both given prison sentences yesterday for abusing their five-year-old son. According to the conviction, in one incident the mother ordered her husband to burn the boy with a knife heated over a flame. Beersheba Magistrate's Court ordered the father, 30, to serve eight months and the mother, 28, 10 months. However, since the couple has six children the judge ordered the mother to serve her sentence first.

Police organizing to protect Golan Druse

Top Galilee district police brass met yesterday to decide on measures to protect the lives and property of Golan Heights Druse who support Israel. The meeting followed an increasing number of incidents, including two torchings of a storeroom belonging to Salman Abu Salah, a leading supporter of Israel, and an attempt to torch his car. Community leaders say many Israeli citizens among the Druse are considering leaving the Golan because of social and religious discrimination against them within the Druse community.

British minister due here

Foreign Office Minister Derek Fatchett, responsible for the Middle East in the new British government, was due to arrive here from Cairo late last night for a one-day fact-finding trip, part of a short tour he is making of the region. He is to meet today with Foreign Minister David Levy in Jerusalem, visit Har Homa, and then travel to Gaza to meet Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat in the evening. He will be traveling tomorrow to Jordan and Syria. Fatchett is the first member of the Blair government to visit the region. He was previously here as opposition spokesman for foreign affairs in December 1995 and January 1996.

Settlements may be merged

Interior Ministry Director-General Ya'acov Efrati has appointed a committee to investigate the possibility of merging local council authorities in Judea and Samaria. The local authorities slated for investigation are part of the Samaria regional council. A ministry spokeswoman said yesterday the committee is to examine the present municipal structures of Elkana, Oranit, Sha'are Tikva and Etz Ephraim to determine if they can be merged. The committee will present its findings in three months time.

Thirtysomethings get chance at academia

Some 200 individuals over age 30 who never received a matriculation certificate have been accepted for studies in the nation's universities, the Education Ministry announced Sunday. The students, mostly from development towns and Project Renewal neighborhoods, are part of a new program entitled "Thirty Plus to University" being run jointly by the Housing Ministry's Project Renewal program and the Education Ministry. Some 1,000 students of similar age and background are studying in a special preparatory course prior to beginning academic studies. Education Minister Ze'evulun Hammer said the project will help reduce educational, social and economic gaps between development towns and larger cities.

Netanya gangland figure murdered

By RAINIE MARCUS

Alex Dubisky, 46, known to Netanya police as a casino operator, was gunned down in gangland-style in broad daylight as he was sitting in his cafe in the city's busy Kikar Atzma'ut yesterday. Eyewitnesses told police that Dubisky was shot in the head at close range by a motorcycle rider, who sped off after making sure that his victim was dead. His wife, Paulina, was gunned down three months ago and police believe that her murderer had intended to kill Dubisky. A year prior to Paulina's death, her son Shlomi, a soldier, was also shot dead as he was getting into his stepfather's car. Police believe the bullets which ended his life were also meant for Dubisky.

Dubisky was sitting in his cafe when a motorcycle rider approached, fired several bullets and sped off. He was hit several times in the head. Police believe the murder was part of a struggle for control of gambling territories in the city. Meanwhile, the body of Suhaim Zebeida, 31, a divorced mother of two from Lod, was discovered covered with leaves yesterday in a citrus grove near Moshav Ben-

Shemen. Police theorized she was murdered for reasons of "family honor," but are also exploring other avenues in their investigation. Preliminary pathological examinations indicated she was killed 24 to 48 hours previously. A paramedic said she had been severely beaten, especially on the left side of her face, and that her blouse was covered in blood.

Homeless protest

Homeless people protest outside the Jerusalem International Conference Center yesterday, while Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu opened a session of the National Council for the War on Poverty and Social Differences. Netanyahu promised a large-scale land sale to help solve the housing problem. Meretz also held a demonstration at the site, blaming Netanyahu for causing a recession and unemployment. MK Anat Maor called the council a way for Netanyahu to ignore the problem.

Vote on PA funding bill postponed

By LIAT COLLINS

The vote on first reading of a bill relating to the transfer of funds to the Palestinian Authority has been postponed by another week, this time at the initiative of the National Religious Party. Last week, Labor and Meretz, angered by what they said was Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's attempt to rely on the opposition to get the bill through, despite heavy coalition objections and the massive absence of coalition members for the scheduled vote, decided to turn it into a no-confidence motion. The bill would extend agreements regarding the transfer of income tax of workers from the autonomous areas to the PA in force for Gaza and Jericho to the other areas under PA control. Netanyahu agreed to a request by NRP faction chairman Hanan Porat that Finance Minister Dan Meridor not respond to the bill, delaying the vote by another week. No-confidence motions are only voted on on Mondays, after the debate has finished and been answered by the government. Netanyahu agreed to postpone the vote until after his meeting with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak today. Tomorrow, he is expected to meet with NRP MKs to discuss the matter. Porat said the funds amount to millions of shekels a year and said there is no reason to continue paying them while the negotiations are frozen and in view of the reports of widespread financial corruption within the PA. Coalition chairman Michael Eitan, however, criticized Porat and MK Michael Kleiner (Geshet), head of the Land of Israel Front. "It's unacceptable that there are certain elements within the coalition who from time to time apparently want to prove their loyalty to the settlers and will drag things in such a way that ultimately we'll be left without settlements, peace, or Jerusalem," he said. Kleiner described the opposition's turning the subject into a no-confidence motion as "a dirty trick."

Ben-Ari appeal decision due today

By RAINIE MARCUS

The Tel Aviv District Court is to rule this morning on an appeal against the 10-day remand of Zvi Ben-Ari, described by police as one of the heads of the Russian underworld here. Ben-Ari was arrested on suspicion of murdering a banker in Russia, defrauding Russian banks of $85 million, and conspiring to kill another banker. Police told the court that, during the past few days, they had been informed that Ben-Ari's friends were attempting to disrupt the investigation, including helping him escape.

The lives of five of his employees, who are also being held, are in danger from Russian criminals, police said. A senior police source said that "the fate of informers within the Russian mafia network is death, and certain parties may be worried that Ben-Ari's employees will cooperate with investigators."

Ben-Ari's lawyers have argued that Israeli courts have no jurisdiction for crimes he allegedly committed abroad, and that offenses he allegedly committed here are "simply financial ones, which do not warrant his remand."

Meanwhile, the office equipment confiscated by the National Crimes Squad when Ben-Ari was arrested has been ordered returned to his company, United European Finance Ltd., by Petah Tikva Magistrate's Court. Police also seized nearly NIS 400,000 (from the company), and the court is to decide this morning whether it will be returned or remain in custody.

book department

LEARN MORE ABOUT JUDAISM

Published by the Joint Authority for Jewish Zionist Education, Department for Torah Education and Culture in the Diaspora

STUDIES IN THE WEEKLY SIDRA
by Prof. Nechama Leibowitz
Translated into English and adapted by Aryeh Newman. Studies in the Parashat Hashavuah with questions, comprehensive sources and subject indices. Hardcover.
Bereshit (Genesis) - 2nd ed. 624 pp. JP Price NIS 49.00
Shemot (Exodus) - 2 vols. 783 pp. JP Price NIS 92.00
Vayikra (Leviticus) - 2 vols. 688 pp. JP Price NIS 92.00
Bamidbar (Numbers) - 444 pp. JP Price NIS 49.00
Devarim (Deuteronomy) - 435 pp. JP Price NIS 49.00

JP Special for ALL 7 vols. NIS 319.00

POPULAR HALACHAH - A GUIDE TO JEWISH LIVING
Rabbi Jacob Berman's modern presentation of Jewish laws and customs written for a general audience. Hardcover. Three volume set.
Vol. I: Roots of Halachah, Piseing, Tzitzit, Tefillin, Prayer, Torah Reading, Synagogue, Blessings. 275 pp.
Vol. II: Shabbat, Festivals, the Calendar, Teshuvah, High Holidays, Minor Festivals. 359 pp.
Vol. III: Kiddush Hashem, Human Relationships, Marriage and Family Life, Between Israel and the Nations. 127 pp.

JP Special for 3 volume set NIS 85.00

Books, The Jerusalem Post, P.O.B. 81, Jerusalem 91000
Please send me Studies in the Weekly Sidra
 Complete seven volume set NIS 319.00
 Bereshit NIS 49.00 Shemot NIS 92.00 Vayikra NIS 92.00
 Bamidbar NIS 49.00 Devarim NIS 49.00
 Popular Halachah, three volume set, NIS 85.00
Postage in Israel: one copy NIS 6, two or more NIS 10 or door to door delivery (where available) NIS 19
Total NIS _____
Enclosed check payable to The Jerusalem Post, or credit card details.
Please list gift recipient's name, address and message separately.
 Visa Isc/MCD Diners AmEx
CC No. _____ Exp. _____
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Code _____
Phone (day) _____ ID No. _____
Signature _____

MKs tackle classroom violence

By LIAT COLLINS

The Knesset Education Committee yesterday tackled the question of violence in schools, with all MKs present describing the situation as serious. The MKs heard the results of a survey conducted in 11 Jerusalem state and state-religious schools in 1994 among eighth- and 10th-grade students. Fifty percent of the students reported having been involved in some form of physical fight in the previous year; 73% of the boys said they had been involved in at least one incident and 24% said they had been involved in four or more. Among the girls, 25% reported having been involved in at least one fight and 4% said they had been involved in four or more. Ch-Supt. Mickey Golan, from the police juvenile department, said the police deals only with cases of violence which are reported. Golan said there had been a rise in the reported cases of violence in schools, but a drop of 8.5% in the number of cases investigated by police in 1996 compared with the previous year. Committee chairman Emanuel Zissman (Third Way), while taking the findings seriously, said children had always been involved in fights in schools and the main thing is to discover whether the problem is spreading and whether schools have a policy capable of dealing with it. At the end of the discussion, the committee issued a declaration expressing concern at the problem of violence in schools among students, toward the teachers and by parents toward teachers. The committee also called on Education Minister Ze'evulun Hammer to reexamine the balance between students' and parental rights and the school's jurisdiction on disciplinary matters. The committee is calling for a parliamentary inquiry to examine the factors influencing the level of violence in schools. MKs said they would investigate the possibility of legislation which would allow parents more control over the nature of programs shown in children's viewing time, and renewed their demand that Israeli television stations stop showing violent programs at times when children are likely to be watching. MK Ze'ev Boim (Likud) said part of the problem is due to large classes and lack of manpower.

Panel: Secular schools should absorb Ethiopians

By LIAT COLLINS

"Every possible mistake has been made in the absorption of children from Ethiopian immigrant families into the school system," MK Adisu Massala (Labor) told the Knesset Immigration and Absorption Committee yesterday. He demanded the government "take a decision to disperse Ethiopian immigrant students among schools in the correct proportions while providing a reasonable budget and professional manpower." Committee chairwoman Naomi Blumenthal (Likud) called on non-religious state schools to open their gates to the immigrant children. "It's unacceptable that state school principals can prevent children from a certain community from integrating within their schools," she said. Yohanan Ben-Ya'acov, head of the Education Ministry's absorption authority, said some 13,000 Ethiopian immigrant children study in state religious schools and 3,000 in state secular schools. He said the choice is the parents, but Yehuda Aharon, assistant supervisor for religious schools, said the reason for the uneven distribution is that state secular schools are not particularly willing to absorb them. Ben-Ya'acov presented statistics showing that in 1994, 32 percent of Ethiopian immigrant children took matriculation exams, but only 23% actually matriculated. Last year, 57% took the exams and 39% passed and got a certificate. He said the education system this year has invested some NIS 130 million in the Ethiopian immigrant children, including special lessons and projects. According to Chen Lipschitz, from the Brookdale Institute, there is almost no financial aid for children of nursery school age. Some 3,000 Ethiopian immigrant children under the age of three are in no educational framework. "The problem starts there and is reflected later in school," she said.

JERUSALEM SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, IBA
Music Director: David Shallon The 59th Season 1996-97 at the Israel Festival, Jerusalem

Stravinsky Evening
David Shallon, Conductor
Assaf Levin, Director
"Pulcinella"
"Oedipus Rex", Opera - Oratorio
A Semi staged production
Thursday 29.5.97, 8:30 pm
Henry Crown Symphony Hall, Jerusalem Theater

Mendelssohn Marathon
Yuri Ahronovich, Conductor
Claire Bloom, Narrator
Orly Shaham, Piano
Marina Levitt, Soprano
Lily Tumei, Soprano
The Hemiola Female Choir
Symphony No. 12 for Strings
Piano Concerto No. 1 in g minor
"A Midsummer Night's Dream"
Monday 9.6.97, 8pm
Henry Crown Symphony Hall, Jerusalem Theater

Tickets: "Bimot" 02-6250905, "Klana" 02-6256869 at the Orchestra Box Office, 02-5611494.9

ISRAEL - NEW ROAD ATLAS

97 pages of superb tourist information. Detailed road maps, with even the smallest settlements, all of Israel's roads, interchanges and junctions, gas stations, campsites, etc., clearly marked. Large scale maps of Tel Aviv, Haifa and Jerusalem metropolitan areas, with main streets and major tourist attractions indicated. 63 color illustrations, showing all the interchanges on Israel's motorways. An absolute necessity for every motorist planning a trip in Israel.

Softcover, spiral bound, large format.
Published by MAP and MOD Publishing House.
 Large Format - JP price NIS 75.00
 Pocket size - JP price NIS 62.00

To: Books, The Jerusalem Post, P.O.B. 81, Jerusalem 91000.
Please send me ISRAEL - The New Road Atlas
Enclosed please find my check, payable to The Jerusalem Post, or see my credit card details.
For overseas airmail, please add NIS 18.00

VISA ISRACARD DINERS
CC No. _____ Exp. _____
Name _____ Address _____
City _____ Code _____ Tel. (day) _____
ID _____ Signature _____

Japanese vessels ram island protesters

HONG KONG) - Sea-borne Chinese protesters headed for port yesterday after two vessels were rammed by the Japanese coast guard to prevent them from landing on a disputed island chain, the protesters' Hong Kong headquarters said.

Spokesman Ho Hom-man said the vessel carrying Hong Kong protesters sprang a leak after being hit repeatedly by Japanese vessels, and was heading to Taiwan.

Eleven journalists were being taken to Taiwan after their boat also was rammed by Japanese vessels, rousing six or seven of them into the sea.

There were no casualties, Ho said, but two protesters from the Hong Kong boat remained in Japanese custody after jumping or being thrown aboard a coast-guard vessel.

The protesters had sailed from Hong Kong and Taiwan to the Diaoyu archipelago, Senkaku in Japanese, half-way between Taiwan and Okinawa. They had planned to land on one of the uninhabited islets to stake China's and Taiwan's claim to them. Japan rules the islets and insists they are Japanese territory.

China yesterday slammed Japan's military alliance with the United States, accusing the two allies of targeting Beijing and warning of a resurgence in Japanese militarism.

"The long-term goal (of the alliance) is to deal with the imaginary troubles made by an economically and militarily stronger China," the official China Daily quoted Zhao Jieqi, a research fellow of the institute of Japanese studies of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, as saying.

The China Daily also denounced the planned revision of the 1978 Japan-US joint "defence guidelines" for security cooperation. It is expected to be updated by autumn this year.

"The redefined US-Japan security agreement helps set the tiger out of the cage," the newspaper quoted Liu Jiangyong, director of the department of northeast Asian studies of the Chinese Contemporary International Relations Institute, as saying in the same article.

"Japan...can burst its shackles and develop military strength without much restraint," Liu said. "Considering Japan's unrepentant attitude towards its militarist past, it is clear that China and other victims of Japan's invasion war will have cause for increased worry," the newspaper said. (Agencies)

Turkish Chief of Staff Ismail Hakki Karadayi and other generals accompany Prime Minister Necmettin Erbakan during a visit to a cemetery yesterday. Earlier, the military told Erbakan it was 'purging' its pro-Islamic officers. (Reuters)

Turkish military pressures Islamist Premier Erbakan

News agencies

ANKARA - Turkey's generals yesterday once again rebuked Prime Minister Necmettin Erbakan for his Islamic policies, announcing a purge of pro-Islamic officers.

It was the latest clash between the military, which considers itself the guardian of Turkey's secular system, and the governing Welfare Party, which has been seeking to put a greater Muslim stamp on Turkey.

The generals summoned Erbakan for a six-hour closed-door meeting.

A brief military statement said "necessary decisions were taken regarding the disciplinary and ethical situations of some personnel."

It referred to the expulsions of some pro-Islamic officers from the army. Their number was not given.

Erbakan apparently was pressured into signing off on the decision, but requested that it should be played down to avert criticism from his constituency.

The statement also said "domestic and foreign threats to Turkey were assessed" during the meeting. The army calls radical Islam such a threat.

Erbakan has avoided defying the generals openly, but he has resisted giving in to their demands to end Islamic policies.

The military served notice to Erbakan in February to take measures to protect secularism. The directives include closing down religious oriented schools and banning Islamic attire.

Last week, four deputies of the center-right True Path party resigned from the party to push their leader, Deputy Prime Minister Tansu Ciller, to withdraw from the coalition.

Among Erbakan's Islamization moves have been the rearrangement of work hours to fit fasting times during Ramadan, a proposal to allow female civil servants to wear Islamic head covers and plans to build a mosque in Istanbul's main square.

He also advocates a foreign policy tailored to draw Turkey closer to Arab states and Iran. Turkey is a NATO member and hopes to join the European Union.

A prosecutor last week filed charges to shut down Welfare, saying the party is unconstitutional because of its Islamist stance.

In the southern coastal city of Antalya Turkish police yesterday arrested 17 people for membership of an illegal Islamic group.

They were charged with membership of the outlawed Anatolian Federal Islamic State and trying to replace the constitution with a system based on religious principles, the state-run agency Anatolia said, without giving further details.

Meanwhile Cyprus yesterday rejected Turkey's position that it has occupied a third of that country since 1974 to protect the Turkish Cypriot minority.

Turkey is in Cyprus because "it considers it a Turkish colony," President Glafcos Clerides said in a written statement.

He said Turkey's "expansionist intentions" are demonstrated by actions such as the colonization of the Turkish-occupied north by mainland settlers, changing place names and destroying "our cultural heritage and many others."

The Cypriot leader was responding to weekend remarks by Turkish President Suleyman Demirel who said that Turkey's only interest in Cyprus is the security of the Turkish Cypriot minority.

A breakaway Turkish Cypriot state set up in the north is recognized only by Ankara.

Clerides also rejected Demirel's claim that Cyprus cannot join the European Union before Turkey. This claim "betrays Mr. Demirel's mentality within whose frame Cyprus is considered a Turkish colony," he said.

Autocracy returns to Kinshasa

KINSHASA - It can be as seemingly harmless as not paying the bus fare, or as deadly as shooting a defenseless man in the back.

A week after welcoming Laurent Kabila's victorious rebel alliance into Kinshasa with cheers and palm fronds, Kinshasans cite increasing signs of the autocracy so prevalent under Mobutu Sese Seko, the Zairian dictator Kabila ousted.

Raphael Ghenda, the information minister of the newly-named Congo, announced a ban on demonstrations Saturday night, a few hours after soldiers broke up an opposition march and detained a few dozen protesters. They took film and videotapes from journalists covering the march.

And yesterday the Kabila regime banned all activities of political parties and public demonstrations in the capital until further notice, citing a need to ensure security. The crackdown, announced by state television on its main lunchtime news, followed a weekend decision by veteran opposition leader Etienne Tshisekedi and his militants to stage fresh protest marches in the city on tomorrow and Friday.

Officials said the measure did not extend beyond the capital. "Individual or collective public demonstrations are formally prohibited throughout the city of Kinshasa until further notice," the communique said, quoting a need to protect public safety.

"All activities of the political parties are banned in Kinshasa until further notice," the communique added.

At the same time, it said no unit of Kabila's forces would be allowed to circulate in the city without specific orders.

Anyone with weapons in their possession should hand them in or they would be considered "enemies of the liberation of the people" and would face the full weight of the law, it added.

Earlier, Kabila's justice minister, Celestin Louangy, said the law in the new Democratic Republic of Congo would be administered impartially.

"We must end something that has always prevailed in this country - a sense of impunity," he said as he moved into his new offices.

Opposition activists marched in Kinshasa on Friday and Saturday. Kabila forces fired in the air to disperse them and took away some of the protesters. Government officials said they were later released.

Kinshasa went to work normally yesterday despite opposition predictions of a spontaneous stay-home protest.

Kabila's ministers accuse Tshisekedi of deluding the people to feed his own ambition. "Tshisekedi aides say Kabila has flooded the capital with foreign troops and accuse him of seeking to return to a one-party state." (Agencies)

Ex-ministers arrested in Sierra Leone army coup

FREETOWN (Reuters) - Troops in Sierra Leone's capital searched houses looking for ministers of the former civilian government yesterday, a day after a military council seized power in the West African state.

Military sources said five former ministers were detained at the military headquarters.

South Africa joined the UN and the Organization of African Unity (OAU) in condemning Sunday's coup, which put an end to just over a year of civilian rule.

The coup leaders announced the formation of an Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC) led by Major Johnny Paul Koromah. They said they wanted to bring rebels of the Revolutionary United Front into the government to consolidate an elusive peace in the country's civil war.

Staff at Freetown's main hospital said at least 15 people were killed in the fighting. Lebanese Foreign Minister Faris Bouze said the dead included two Lebanese.

The hospital sources said two Nigerian soldiers from the West African ECOMOG force had been killed in the fighting, but ECOMOG Field Commander General Victor Mah said in Lagos there had been no Nigerian casualties.

AFRC spokesman Captain Paul Thomas urged people to return to work but shops and markets remained closed, though hundreds of people came out to view the damage from fighting around the presidential offices.

Koromah said he had overthrown president Ahmad Tejan Kabbah because his government, elected last year after four years of military rule, had failed to consolidate peace and the political situation had encouraged tribal conflict.

Rebel leader Foday Sankoh, speaking from the Nigerian capital Abuja, where he has been kept by Nigeria's military rulers for the past two months, declined to comment on the invitation to join the military government.

WORLD

in brief

Yeltsin says NATO accord good for world

PARIS (Reuters) - Russian President Boris Yeltsin said on arrival in Paris that an agreement between Moscow and NATO to be signed today was a major step for Russia and the entire world.

"It's a big step for Russia, for NATO, for Europe and for the whole world," Yeltsin told reporters. "It's good for Russia, America, France, England, Germany."

They all won, all Europe won. And security won - that's the main thing." Before leaving Moscow, Yeltsin had reiterated Moscow's general opposition to NATO's plans to take in new members from eastern Europe.

The alliance is due to issue the first invitations to prospective members - probably Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic - at a summit in Madrid in July.

Rival Koreas sign aid accord for hungry North

BEIJING (Reuters) - South Korea agreed to send thousands of tons of food aid to the famine-threatened North under the first direct agreement between the Red Cross societies of the Cold War rivals in more than a decade.

Seoul officials hailed the agreement to ship 50,000 tons of food aid to the North by the end of July as a symbolic lifting of the veil of isolation and ignorance hung around the North's hungry people.

"We have no doubt that this agreement will (help build momentum) to increase mutual cooperation between (the) two Koreas on the basis of humanitarianism," said South Korean Red Cross official Kogh Young-ke.

US Air Force sergeant gets 30 years for rape

FAIRCHILD AIR FORCE BASE (AP) - A former Air Force base security officer was sentenced to 30 years in prison, a day after a military jury convicted him of rape and 14 related charges.

Master Sgt. Napoleon Bailey, 39, will also receive a dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and reduction to the lowest enlisted rank.

The former Fairchild Air Force Base security officer was convicted on 15 of the 17 charges he faced for attacks reported by three women. One alleged victim was a fellow base security officer.

President-elect pays homage to Khomeini

TEHERAN (AP) - Iran's president-elect paid his respects at the grave of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, pledging to continue the path of the late revolutionary leader.

Mohammad Khatami, a moderate cleric who gained a stunning victory in Iran's first free election since the 1979 revolution, was welcomed by Khomeini's grandson, Hassan, to the golden-domed mausoleum that is a place of pilgrimage for millions every year.

"By the blessing of the revolution the people of Iran have started a new chapter in their history," said Khatami, whose victory at the polls against a hard-line cleric was seen as a signal for a milder form of Islam.

Skydiver escapes doomed plane

MIAMI (AP) - Clinging to a wing and waiting to be told to jump, skydiving student Carol O'Connell watched in horror as the pilot struggled with the controls and the little plane began to stall.

With 22 jumps under her belt, O'Connell was left with two choices: leap from the out-of-control and possibly overloaded plane or hang on and hope the pilot would recover. She jumped.

As she parachuted slowly to the ground, she could see the Cessna 210 with six colleagues trapped inside as it corkscrewed into a field of sweet potatoes and burst into flames. Everyone aboard was killed.

"I'm very grateful to be alive," O'Connell, 43, yesterday told the Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale, Florida. "I can't explain why I'm still alive while these other people have left behind many loved ones."

"I guess when it's your time to go, you go. It wasn't my time," investigators were looking into whether the single-engine plane was carrying too much weight, with seven people and skydiving gear aboard an aircraft designed for six. The passenger seats had been removed to give the sky-divers room. Video filmed by a witness indicated the plane wasn't going fast enough after making a turn.

The plane took off from Homestead General Airport and crashed about a two km away in a rural farming district between Miami and the Everglades. On a videotape of the crash captured by a witness, the plane spins to the ground at a 45 degree angle, its nose down.

"It was pretty much a belly flop," fire Capt. Robert Suarez said. "It landed flat with much force."

O'Connell was on a small platform attached to the right side of the plane, awaiting instructions from the jump master as the plane climbed. She was supposed to jump at 1,000 meters, but then the left wing dipped and the plane began to shake.

"The engine seemed fine," O'Connell told the newspaper. "One of the last things I saw was the pilot struggling to handle the plane."

She jumped and the plane spiraled crazily into the field a few seconds later. She landed moments after that, 24 meters away from the flaming wreckage.

Book department

THE POMEGRANATE PENDANT: A Historical Novel by Dvora Waysman

This is a novel of Jerusalem, seen through the eyes of Mazal ben-Yichya - a fourteen year old newlywed in Sana'a in the year 1881, through the years in the Jewish Quarter, to the finale in 1956. The events, people and streets of Jerusalem are made real for the reader. Hardcover, 217 pp.

JP Price: NIS 49

Books, The Jerusalem Post, POB 81, Jerusalem 91000

Please send me _____ copies of: THE POMEGRANATE PENDANT at NIS 49 each. Postage in Israel: one copy NIS 6, two or more NIS 10

Total NIS _____

Enclosed check payable to The Jerusalem Post, or credit card details. Please list gift recipient's name, address and message separately.

Visa Iso/MCD Diners AmEx

CC No. _____ Exp. _____

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ Code _____

Phone (day) _____ ID No. _____

Signature _____

"I closed the book reluctantly; I did not want the spell to be broken." Review Ben Dov, The Jerusalem Post Magazine.

ORDER BY phone: 02-624-1282 fax: 02-624-1212 e-mail: orders@post.co.il

The Official SCRABBLE Players Dictionary

Newly revised and updated third edition - endorsed by the National SCRABBLE Association for recreational and school use

Includes more than 100,000 acceptable two-to-eight-letter words

Includes spelling variants such as 'colour' and 'centre'

Alphabetically arranged entries for fast and easy word-finding

Published by Merriam Webster, Softcover

JP Price NIS 31

Books, The Jerusalem Post, POB 81, Jerusalem 91000

Please send me _____ copies of: OFFICIAL SCRABBLE PLAYERS DICTIONARY at NIS 31 each. Postage in Israel: one copy NIS 6, two or more NIS 10

Total NIS _____

Enclosed check payable to The Jerusalem Post, or credit card details. Please list gift recipient's name, address and message separately.

Visa Iso/MCD Diners AmEx

CC No. _____ Exp. _____

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ Code _____

Phone (day) _____ ID No. _____

Signature _____

ORDER BY phone: 02-624-1282 fax: 02-624-1212 e-mail: orders@post.co.il

THE JERUSALEM POST

F. DAVID RADLER, Chairman, Board of Directors
NORMAN SPECTOR, President & Publisher

Founded in 1932 by GERSHON AGRON

EDITORIAL OFFICES AND ADMINISTRATION: The Jerusalem Post Building, P.O. Box 81, Ramat Gan, Jerusalem 91000. Telephone: 02-531-5666. Fax: 02-538-9527. CIRCULATION: 02-531-5610. Fax: 02-538-9017. ADVERTISING: 02-531-5608. 02-531-5637-40. Fax: 02-538-8408. TEL AVIV: 5 Rehov HaNasagar, P.O. Box 28398 (61283) Telephone: 03-699353. Fax: 6993277. HAIFA: 20 Nordau, Hadar Hacarmel, Telephone: 04-8623166. Published daily except Sunday, in Jerusalem, Israel by The Palestine Post Ltd. Printed by The Jerusalem Post Press in Jerusalem. Registered at the G.P.O. © The Jerusalem Post 1997. Reproduction or storage in a retrieval system, or in any other form, is prohibited without permission. Editors: 1932-1953 GERSHON AGRON, 1953-1974 TED LURIE, 1974-1975 LEA BEN-DOR, 1975-1989 ARI RATH and ERWIN FRENKEL, 1990-1992 N. DAVID GROSS, 1992-1996 DAVID BAR-ILLAN. INTERNET EDITION: http://www.jpost.co.il General E-mail: jpost@jpost.co.il Editorial E-mail: editors@jpost.co.il Subscribers E-mail: subs@jpost.co.il

JEFF BARAK, Editor
CARL SCHRAG, Managing Editor
AMOTZ ASA-EL, Associate Editor, Business
DAVID BRINN, News Editor
ELIOT ZIMELMAN, Night Editor
LEORA EREN FRUCHT, Features Editor
THOMAS O'DWYER, Foreign Editor
JUDY MONTAGU, Op-Ed Editor

AVI GOLAN, Executive Vice President, Marketing & Advertising
PAUL STASZEWSKI, CPA, Vice President, Finance
YOSSI HORN, Vice President, Production
MARRA MESSINGER, Circulation Manager
BENZION MILLER, Tel Aviv Office Manager

The Sharm summit

The summit in Sharm e-Sheikh today between President Hosni Mubarak and Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu is shaping up to be exactly what both sides said it would not be: a summit for the sake of a summit. There is nothing terribly wrong with a summit that, like the recent Weizman-Arafat meeting, breaks more ice without reaching clear water. The parties should not, however, lose sight of the real goal ahead: a way through the current impasse so that final-status talks can begin in earnest.

Israel and the Palestinians are now like two arm-wrestlers who spend an inordinate amount of effort jockeying for a slightly better starting position and will not let the real match begin. Last-minute efforts, such as regarding Har Homa, or adding a few thousand units to existing settlements, cannot fundamentally change the situation that has been created on the ground over the past 30 years.

Each side has its own framework for last-minute maneuvering. For Israel, it is to solidify its connection to certain areas by building new neighborhoods. The Palestinians, too, are quietly playing the same game by building illegally within Jerusalem and along the new Israeli-built bypass roads. In addition, and more importantly, the Palestinians have a much better way to improve their pre-final-status position: Oslo's further redeployments. Though both Israel and the Palestinians are building houses here and there, the Palestinians can look forward to two further handovers of significant chunks of land, which will fundamentally change the starting point for final-status negotiations. These two withdrawals required by Oslo, one of which will ostensibly include the first withdrawal proposed by Israel, but rejected by the Palestinians, will dwarf the last-minute building efforts that are causing such controversy.

The task of today's summit, and others that may follow, should be to devise the safest way through the minefield of pre-final-status threats to the peace process.

The legal status under Oslo of Israeli building and the upcoming redeployments is different — the first is permitted and the second required — but in a strategic sense the two are linked. The significance of both is in their impact on the starting positions of each side in final-status talks.

But the Palestinians cannot have their way on both sides of the equation. They cannot dictate a freeze on Israeli building and, at the same time, take away Israel's US-recognized right to determine the extent of the further redeployments. One possible way out of this crisis might be for Israel to give the Palestinians a choice: a settlement freeze and symbolic redeployments, or no freeze and more substantial redeployments.

The Palestinians are right, in a way, to identify "unilateral actions" as a great threat to the peace process. But requiring Israel to stop such actions, while receiving nothing in return, is also a form of unilateralism — a unilateral concession. Both forms of unilateralism have an explosive effect on the peace process.

The Palestinians define any Israeli action they object to as "unilateral," so such actions are by definition irritants in the peace process. At the same time, demands for unilateral concessions by Israel undermine the process by convincing Israelis that it is a one-way street, leading to much greater concessions that will endanger Israel without bringing peace.

It is the duty of nations playing the role of honest brokers — such as Egypt, Jordan, and the United States — to attempt to eliminate both forms of unilateralism. On this matter, Netanyahu is right: Israel must not be the only party of whom flexibility is demanded. Perhaps a six-month "technical" freeze on building at Har Homa can be part of a solution — but what are the Palestinians willing to pay for such a concession? A return to the status quo ante — restarting talks and restoring security cooperation — is not enough.

If Egypt really wants to play a constructive role in the peace process, it cannot simply become a megaphone for Arafat's positions. If Egypt is backing Arafat to the hilt — or worse, stiffening his stance — then it should not be surprised if the summit has no result. If, however, Egypt presses Arafat to make concessions in response to those being demanded of Israel, then there is a real chance of forward movement.

All the parties should also keep in mind that, whatever the outcome of the summit, Arafat has for the most part won his battle against Israeli building in the territories. Netanyahu is now battling to hold on to Israel's right to build, but everyone knows that, as a practical matter, that right will only be exercised in severely limited form. Arafat has already raised the political cost of building so high that Netanyahu is unlikely to match even the modest expansion that occurred under Rabin and Peres.

Settlement expansion may not be formally frozen, but it has already been slowed to a snail's pace. The situation is ripe for that famous diplomatic strategy: finding a formula that will allow both sides to declare victory and go home.

Yasser's schoolroom

MICHAEL OREN

Hebron Agreement. Worked like a charm.

HOW, though, might Netanyahu apply that lesson? Truth is, he already has.

By acting to expand the settlements, by building on Har Homa, the prime minister is backtracking

The PM has yet another chance to learn from his wily Oslo partner today at Sharm e-Souk. Question is: How good a pupil is he?

not only from the Palestinians, but from the Egyptians as well, as the price of their leadership role in the peace process.

Among possible payments Israel could demand are: a radical reduction in anti-Israel and anti-Semitic propaganda in the Egyptian and Palestinian press; the extradition of known terrorist suspects from the Palestinian Authority to Israel, and the release of Azzam Azzam, the Israeli Druze now languishing in an Egyptian jail on trumped-up spying charges.

Then he could go for a moratorium on all illegal Palestinian building in Jerusalem, the West Bank, and Gaza; concerted efforts by the PA to disarm Hamas and curtail its political activities, and an end to the PA-approved assassination of Arabs suspected of selling land to Israel.

Finally, he could demand the cessation of Egypt's diplomatic campaign against Israel's nuclear capability.

The bill, of course, could be longer, and the items more expensive; Netanyahu must not sell himself cheaply. But neither must Israel's "concession stand" be too pricey. This also is one of Arafat's lessons, namely, knowing when the profits have been maximized, at what point the bargaining must stop.

Netanyahu must not be deprived of his profits, but neither should he risk Mubarak, his customer, walking out.

This, then, will be the prime minister's true test at today's summit: demanding more for his goods, but not so much as to make the deal fall through. His challenge is to learn Arafat's lessons, ingest and adapt them to Israel's needs.

What has worked like a charm for Yasser may well work at Sharm for Bibi.

The writer is a Middle East historian.

It's far-fetched. But, for the sake of argument, let's assume it's true that Hosni Mubarak is meeting Binyamin Netanyahu at Sharm e-Sheikh today without preconditions.

While we're at it, let's also assume that Netanyahu has not secretly agreed in advance to stop construction on the West Bank and Jerusalem for six months in order to reactivate the peace process.

So what, one might ask, is this summit all about? To reaffirm the principle of peace? Hardly.

For the Arabs, peace has never been a principle per se but a commodity for which a tangible price must be paid.

Whether Netanyahu can finally recognize this fact, accept it and turn it to his advantage will determine his success at Sharm.

Today's summit offers him yet another chance to take a lesson from his wily Oslo partner, Yasser Arafat. As adept around the negotiating table as he might be bagging over vegetables in the souk — his tactics aren't all that different — the chairman-cum-president has an awful lot to impart.

One of his most instructive lectures might be entitled "Selling the same merchandise repeatedly, for ever-expanding gains."

In it, Arafat could explain how to take a promise — revising the Palestine National Charter, for example, or ceasing to support Hamas — and sell it over and over again to the US and Israel in return for escalating concessions in terms of, say, financial aid and settlement freezes.

He's been pulling this off profitably since 1988, the first time he publicly renounced terrorism, and, as a reward, received a strategic dialogue with Washington.

Later that same pledge was offered as the quid pro quo for Oslo 1 and 2, as well as for the conservative candidate, parliamentary speaker Ali Akbar Nateq-Nouri, would win over 40 percent of the votes. Khatami would get only 33 percent, with the rest of the vote divided between minor candidates and "don't knows."

Iran's women got Khatami in

GWYNNE DYER

The poll was based on the responses of over 1,000 residents

They want change, and they said so in the polling booths last week of Tehran, where Khatami was expected to do better than elsewhere. Yet it underestimated his support by more than half.

So did everybody change their minds in one month? Of course not. It's just that an Iranian woman can get into a lot of trouble for talking to strangers, so Iranian opinion polls, whether conducted in the streets or by knocking on doors, are bound to miss most of the female voters.

But in the polling booths, they were there in their millions: The turnout was 88 percent.

So what can Khatami do with this resounding victory, with or without a female vice-president?

Khatami is not a "liberal," a label even more despised in Iran than it is in America; he is a Shi'ite Muslim cleric. And he has no intention of spending his limited political capital trying to change Iran's terrible relationship with the US.

In foreign policy Khatami is hemmed in by the enmity of the US and the paranoia of Iran's own revolutionary ideology, though he wants voters that Iran must stop "adoring or hating the West," and develop a more balanced attitude. And on economic and trade issues he has equally little room for maneuver.

Rafsanjani leaves Khatami an economy where debt and inflation are more under control, but it is still a nightmare. Iran's population has literally doubled to 69 million since the 1979 revolution, and economic growth has not remotely kept up.

The true unemployment figure may be as high as 30 percent, and another 30 percent are seriously underemployed by world standards.

Yet the bazaar merchants and impoverished clergymen who became the revolution's political elite are its chief economic beneficiaries as well, so they will not permit major economic reforms.

What's left for Khatami is the political and social field — and it's because they believed that he would start opening Iran up in these areas that the women, the young people, and everybody else interested in change voted for him.

He spoke last year of the need for "freedom of thought and the assurance of being able to express oneself in all security."

Can he deliver? In Iran, people tend to think in symbolic terms. Will he re-legalize satellite dishes? Will he liberalize women's dress codes?

But that matters a lot less than whether he will push Iran down the road toward a more tolerant future, one where women and other human beings without beards and turbans also have a say in the way their country is run, and in the circumstances of their own lives.

The writer is a London-based journalist and historian.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

NRP POLITICAL POSITIONS

Sir, — I am sure MK Shaul Yahalom would appreciate your returning him to his home in Elkana rather than recording him, as Herb Keinson has it, as living in Kedumim (May 14).

Perhaps, when one uses demography to define political positions, the NRP becomes the party of the settlers, since now five of the party's nine members live in the settlements of Yeshu. But domicile does not necessarily define political positions. Yigal Bibi, who lives in Gush Etzion, is considered a NRP "dove." Avner Shaki, who lives in Tel Aviv, is considered a NRP "hawk."

Nissan Siomianski, until Oslo, was dedicated to creating a beautiful, quality, residential town in Elkana. His popularity was and is so deep-rooted that no one could beat him in any local election over 20 years of Elkana's existence. He was a full-time and over-time mayor. Oslo changed him. The threat to Yeshu, to Jerusalem and to Elkana proved to him that, with the Rabin/Peres government, there was no territorial consensus, no territorial "red" lines. Everything was vulnerable. So, "he came out of the closet," and showed the leadership qualities nationally which we in Elkana knew and recognized for years from his local activities. That is what he brings to the Knesset.

Together with MK Shaul Yahalom, Elkana will now have contributed two excellent Knesset members devoted to Israel, to its Jewish and democratic values.

MEL BORENSTEIN

Elkana.

OBJECTIONABLE COMMENTS

Sir, — Two items that I read recently in your newspaper have managed to erase a good deal of the joy I felt at having been privileged to celebrate the miracle of Israel's rebirth and continued existence once again.

The first was a comment by Internal Security Minister Kahalani who, after the horrific behavior of a few haredim criminals on Remembrance Day (stoning policemen during the sounding of the siren), decided to compound the felony with his astounding response. How can the man responsible for the police state: "I am sure that their rabbis will punish these hoodlums appropriately." What about the police, the courts? Kahalani has now officially placed an entire segment of the population (haredim) outside and above the law. The next time I am stopped for a traffic violation, can I also have my rabbi deal with me instead of the police or the courts?

The second item was a comment by your reporter Abraham Rabinovich, who continues in this same vein of excluding or isolating parts of the population in his remarks on Remembrance Day (and Independence Day). When I stood silently as the siren wailed, I was not expressing my "secular discipline and secular calling" (which would be difficult as I am religious). I was paying homage to the fallen, thanking God that my own "Golan-chik" had returned safely and hoping that my second son, who just received his first call-up notice, will serve and return safely as well. I am sure that many of my fellow citizens were thinking similar thoughts and not glorying in their religiosity or secularism.

Mr. Rabinovich further divides the country into haredim and secularists. Thank you for disenfranchising me and all the other members of the national religious camp. According to the last election results, we are still around and going strong.

These are but two examples of the way that our leaders (and the media) can exacerbate problems rather than try to deal with them or heal them.

KENNETH C. KOSLOWE

Petah Tikva.

OFFENSIVE HEADLINE

Sir, — The headline of your article of May 7, "Colombian leader's visit displeases US" is disrespectful, not just to Colombia, but to Israel as well. President Samper came to visit a sovereign friend and not a US colony!

Furthermore, your statement that "he is suspected of being linked to drug trafficking" is false. He has been accused (but not convicted) of accepting drug money for his campaign, but never of being involved or profiting personally from the drug business.

JAIME GLOTTMANN

Ra'anana.

THE NE'EMAN ACQUITTAL

Sir, — Only an hour after Ya'acov Ne'eman's acquittal, the pundits of our state radio were defining it as a problem for the prime minister. Now, they explained, Mr. Netanyahu would have to decide what to do about Tzahi Hanegbi and the justice portfolio, even before all the legal developments are played out.

When the investigation of Mr. Ne'eman began, it was defined as a problem for Mr. Netanyahu. By all logic, the acquittal should be seen as a problem for Michael Ben-Yair and his political patrons, as well as for those politicians who are so quick to demand resignations from anyone accused of anything.

But no. The pundits had two scripts ready for the court's decision — both of them attacking the prime minister, one in the event of a conviction and one in the event of an acquittal.

The prime minister indeed has a problem deciding about appointments, but that is not the most important issue brought to light by the Ne'eman acquittal. The important issue is reflected in the reaction of the establishment, including Israel Radio.

ISRAEL PICKHOLTZ

Elazar.

Live & let live

SUSAN BELLOS

Unlike some of my more chic acquaintances, I am not yet moving to Tel Aviv.

This is quite mad, of course. My skin bursts like a fried sausage every time the hamsin dumps itself down over Jerusalem. And I love the seaside.

I can't even claim, as many of us apologists used to, that I'm here because Jerusalem is so beautiful. Jerusalem is growing uglier by the day, what with the ripped-up orchards of Ramat Rachel making way for even more hideous "cottages."

What used to be secret and mysterious, such as the hillside of North Jerusalem, topped by the flat quirky peak of Nebi Samwil, is now a deadly suburban sprawl.

In fact, even though ever so many people are quarreling about this place being sacred, primarily to themselves, there are very few secret places left here. Jerusalem, with its hidden courtyards and alleys, used to be rife with secrets, and prided itself on its private, inner life.

However, esthetics, spirituality and all that, have about as much impact in this place as Victorian ladies having fits of the vapors. What really counts in Jerusalem are the eternal verities of real estate, religion and politics.

Which means, for example, that North Jerusalem is now rife with banks and synagogues, and doesn't have a single cinema, let alone a pub.

It also means that more and more of my neighbors are attired in long floppy skirts over sneakers, three-quarter-length sleeves in summertime, and rather peculiar hats.

I don't care about this, of course, because I often find it a rather charming expression of Jerusalem's mosaic. As far as I am concerned, they are just quaint.

The trouble is that these days, not being very good at arithmetic, I haven't noticed that I am now quaint, though less than charming, to my neighbors. While I couldn't care less what they eat or how they dress, they really don't like the smell of my food cooking, or the sight of me in my jeans.

Sacred and secret: my private battle for Jerusalem

HANG on, all those brought up on fair play etc. exclaim, we may be surrounded by a sea of fundamentalists, but it ain't quite Qum yet.

When you actually get down to it, wearing a skirt would not be the end of the world. As I don't drive, closing even more roads on Saturday won't seriously impact my life-style. And not being deeply into heavy metal, I rather appreciate the sheer quiet of Shabbat.

The thing is, though, that while I may be equally odd in my neighbors' eyes I, unlike them, have no battle plans drawn up.

I don't really intend to rescue Geula or the Bukharan Quarter from the fundamentalists and build a small neighborhood theater there, or, perish the thought, a concert hall.

I don't even allow myself to fantasize about a sane alternative to this city's nightmare traffic snarls i.e. an underground transit system.

Who cares about all those wimps suffering from allergies, asthma and cancer, let alone the simple misery of getting to work on a Sunday morning? They are as nothing compared to the national imperative of not stepping on old Jewish bones by mistake.

Being a pacifistic middle-aged female, I just want to live in my house, in my style. And I wouldn't dream of chucking rocks in anybody's direction.

I've also grown up with silly notions such as "Let 100 different flowers bloom." The difference is that as far as many of my neighbors are concerned there's only one flower, and it's black.

Among my more socially advanced and mobile acquaintances, responses to all those black flowers range from threatening to breed more, or to slide off, if not quite to the coastal plain, at least to south of Rehov Straus.

This is, after all, a town built on real estate, religion and politics. And there's one battle about all three going on right now.

It's the battle for the validity of my vision of home as well as theirs. It's the battle for all this city's dues-paying citizens to live, eat, open their mouths or keep secrets as they see fit, and find their own kind of sacredness.

As for sliding off to Tel Aviv, I'd rather chuck a rock.

The writer is a Jerusalem journalist.

Possessed by music

By MICHAEL AJZENSTADT

In the last few years, Bobby McFerrin has conducted almost every major American symphony orchestra as well as the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra. And he is back to lead the IPO in more concerts this week. But in spite of the enthusiastic response from audiences and critics alike, McFerrin recently decided to severely cut down on his conducting engagements. As he is pushing 50, McFerrin believes the time has come to spend more time at home and to focus more on what he really enjoys.

His agents were rather disappointed, but they understood — they had to. And he is now about to take a 13-month sabbatical in order to write an opera. "It is based on a short story by Heinrich von Kleist titled St. Cecilia. I read the story and was fascinated by it. Obviously it is not going to be a classical opera. The singers will use different vocal techniques such as jazz and musical theater singers. There will be African and Persian sounds in this opera. All the music I hear will find its way into my opera."

The opera is one of the relatively few commissioned works McFerrin has ever written. In a phone interview from his Minneapolis home, he says that "I write whenever I have something to write for. Like a new album."

But these days he is much more interested in improvisational music than in composing preset notated music.

Aside from the upcoming opera, McFerrin devotes most of his time to his 12-piece vocal ensemble, Voicestra. "I get immense satisfaction from the improvisation chanting we are doing," he says. "All we do is improvisational. The music comes and we just go with it. Really you have to be totally open and trusting of each other and of the music. It's like Moses leading the Israelites to the Holy Land. At the beginning, they did not know where they were or what they were doing there, but they knew all the time where they were heading to. They knew very well that at the end they would reach the promised land."

Bobby McFerrin says of his vocal ensemble, Voicestra, "All we do is improvisational. The music comes and we just go with it. You have to be totally open and trusting of each other."

But Bobby McFerrin is more than aware that today's classical music world is as far as one can imagine from its promised land. "Classical music as we know it is in a crisis. There are 1,000 reasons why it happened, but it is mainly because we live in a generation bombarded by media images, depriving us of our imagination and drastically cutting our span of attention. Ours is a visual society and classical music is not visual." Is there a way in which classical music can find itself out of the desert and into the promised land? "The way to get out of this crisis is for orchestras to redefine themselves. Many did just that with concerts with McFerrin, for example. So would he be interested in becoming the Moses of the classical music world and lead it to its new-found promised land; would he assume the music director position in a leading orchestra and help it redefine itself for the 21st century? Not really. "I'm not a music-director type. I don't have the patience and it's important to have patience to see it all change."

And anyway, if he had more time, "I would like to teach. I think we are responsible for the name of the works written in our time. We have a creative responsibility to our world, to our society, and the only way to influence what is happening is by teaching the musicians of the future."

Bobby McFerrin argues emphatically that he feels comfortable in all musical genres. "Some people feel I rejected jazz when I began doing classical music, but I actually haven't changed at all."

And in his coming IPO concerts, we will hear samples from the various musical worlds of Bobby McFerrin. There will be numbers with his jazz quartet, his own solo stuff — which he always includes wherever he performs — and there will be some jazz arrangements for orchestra and quartet. And there will, of course, be a few pure classical music numbers which McFerrin will conduct. Aside from Die Flodermus overture, McFerrin will also lead the orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakov's Capriccio Espagnol.

In the classical music world, Bobby McFerrin used to be a somewhat alien apparition, a stranger in paradise, if you will. But just as George Gershwin's An American in Paris — which the orchestra also plays with him — combines the worlds of jazz and classical music in a most natural way, so too does Bobby McFerrin manage to make different musical styles, one unforgettable palette. And what, according to McFerrin, combines it all? "Your own personality and the joy of making music. It's vital, you have to be possessed by the music."

Bobby McFerrin conducts the IPO tonight at the Jerusalem International Convention Center, tomorrow at the Mann Auditorium in Tel Aviv and Wednesday at the Haifa Auditorium. An additional concert at the Mann Auditorium has been scheduled for Thursday due to demand. Thursday, at midnight, McFerrin performs with his jazz trio at the Hangar at the Tel Aviv port.

REVIEWS

in brief

Dance

Premieres 97 at the Inbal Ethnic Arts Center included From Sand to Water (1995) and Firstborn (1986) by Ze'eva Cohen, an Israeli-born choreographer living in the US and teaching at Princeton University. Both works were so outdated that it hurts. If one didn't know that she can do better, one may have thought that both were done by a modern-dance teacher for her intermediate class. Structurewise, it was too simplified; in terms of dance vocabulary, it was dull and hardly challenging, totally lacking in aspiration and, as such, it didn't do any justice to the seemingly amateurish dancers.

Things got better after the intermission, with Ilana Cohen's work, Sajarra, accompanied by Shlomo Bar and his group of musicians. Bar is an authentic and indigenous voice on the local music scene, certainly one of the more talented artists in his particular field. His original score for the work was well matched with Ilana Cohen's talent.

The collaboration between these two materialized stage magic. The work is set to a group of dancers including two Inbal veterans who flavor Cohen's intentions with Inbal's original spice, evoking the unique sights and sounds of Sara Levi-Tanai, the founder of Inbal almost 50 years ago. Under Cohen's tutelage, the dancers seem better than ever — vital, capable and disciplined.

Sajarra is a captivating, intense and dramatic work, Cohen's best, that brings to the stage the arid landscape of the desert, images of archaic culture and bygone rites. Sajarra turned out to be a most rewarding experience. Ora Brafman

There were all the ingredients of success at the Hebrew University Botanical Gardens in Jerusalem on the afternoon of May 25: a beautiful day, an enchanting view, an experienced director, Anne Wilson Wangh, who twice before designed memorable performances (one at the Billy Rose Sculpture Garden of the Israel Museum), an internationally known ballet star, Galina Panova, and other performers, mostly Jerusalemites (like these two), in the three-hour program.

Yet it would be inaccurate to say that the "happening" was a complete triumph, despite careful planning.

It all began with fiery flamenco, with Michaela Harari dancing on a small soundboard laid down on the patio outside the administrative building. It went on to include Anne Breslow's demonstration of Tai-Chi movement by two women, presented by Rachel Milstein.

Sharon Rothberg's group was called Footloose in the Park. Later on there were Ofer Blum's huge puppets, and Rae Man's use of voice and stretches of cloth. Adda Feldman's group was the largest, with her so-called African-style Jazz. And then there was Cyrelle Forman Soffer's long-lasting Balkan Ensemble, which the public enjoyed watching and also joining in with the folk dancing.

Yet what everyone waited for most was to see Panova partnered by Vladimir Tchigirev (who immigrated here from Moscow and had been a principal dancer at the Moscow City Ballet).

The floor was set against the hill and when the sun sank there were no electrical aids to light these two celebrities in an excerpt from Swan Lake, which far-sighted people on the other side of the broad pond could see only as a moving white tuft and a dark shadow (in black) sustaining it in high stretches. Dora Sowden

Concerts

Every music lover who did not attend the concert at the Henry Crown Symphony Hall Jerusalem on May 22 has something to atone for. Music lovers flock to concert halls when the repertoire is based on the three Bs or the tried and tested such as Mozart, Schubert or even Haydn and Tchaikovsky. But when the program consists of works written in our century, they tend to stay at home. And thus, only a select few came to this concert, which was one of the best presented of the season. Those who were there applauded enthusiastically. They realized they were given a very special treat. But where have all the other real music lovers gone?

In his ongoing battle to perform the masterpieces of the 20th century, David Shallon, music director of the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra, led his musicians in a powerful rendition of Britten's wordless Sinfonia da Requiem. This is a most powerful opus, that ends with the mood which usually opens every requiem. It is a relatively concise work which was played to perfection under Shallon's enthusiastic yet always restrained guiding hands.

Shostakovich's monumental Babi Yar Symphony was also played in a most commanding way. Bass Eldar Aifiev, who stood in at the last minute to replace an ill colleague, was glorious as the soloist. And the orchestra responded with all its power, intensity and, at the same time, warmth, to the driving force of its music director. Only Schoenberg's A Survivor from Warsaw was presented in a less than appropriate dramatic manner because of two poor choices: performing it in English instead of in Hebrew and choosing a singer instead of a narrator. Bottom line: accolades to Shallon for planning such a demanding program and to his orchestra for performing it as if it was the only music that mattered to them. Michael Ajzenstadt

David Shallon (Debbie Hill)

Olivia de Havilland: Still searching for her ideal role

By BOB THOMAS

Some say there was no Golden Age in Hollywood, but not Olivia de Havilland, one of the brightest stars of American films in the 1930s and '40s.

"It was a marvelous time before the war and a little bit after," she says, a time of the best and brightest in movie history. And there's a scene she likes to describe from that era: "It was New Year's Eve at Jack Warner's beautiful house," she begins. "Everyone was there, dressed in tuxedos and evening gowns. I was standing at the bar with Howard Hughes, who was my date. On the other side stood Jimmy Stewart. And behind the bar, serving us drinks, was Errol Flynn."

De Havilland won her first Academy Award as best actress just 50 years ago for To Each His Own. Three years later came another, for The Heiress. But she will be forever remembered as Melanie in Gone With the Wind. She is the last surviving star of what is arguably the most popular movie of all time.

"It was on French television last week," she remarked. "It will go on forever, and how thrilling that is. It has this universal life, this continuing life." She offered these explanations for its longevity: "Every nation has experienced war — and defeat and renaissance. So all peoples can identify with the characters."

"Not only that. It's terribly well-constructed. Something happens every three minutes, and it keeps you on your toes or at the edge of your seat, which is quite a feat, I must say."

"And it's beautifully cast. All the supporting players have their moments, which is a wonderful characteristic of a David Selznick film. It used to be characteristic of very well-made films by very good directors in those days. The [character actors] have scenes in which they are stars. That gives a vitality and richness."

Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh and Leslie Howard are gone. Olivia de Havilland at 80 seems indestructible; she recently survived a punishing attack of shingles that caused an angry rash and inflammation of the nerves. Her beauty remains, enhanced by silver hair swept back stylishly.

She has lived in a Paris town house on a quiet side street near the Bois de Boulogne for 40 years. She recently walked a few blocks to a recently opened restaurant for a lengthy lunch with a reporter acquaintance from her Hollywood days. A bright conversationalist, she talked on many matters, often with a warm, throaty laugh.

De Havilland: "I wouldn't object to a fascinating part in a first-rate project. The offers still come, but not what I am looking for." (AP)

The actress retains a sunny optimism, remarkable in view of the troubles that have plagued her life. Her two marriages — to American novelist Marcus Goodrich and French magazine editor Pierre Galante — ended in divorce. She also endured a public feud with her volatile sister, Joan Fontaine.

Yet de Havilland's greatest tragedy concerned her son, Benjamin Goodrich. (She also has a daughter: Paris Match reporter Gisele Galante.) "Benjie was diagnosed with Hodgkin's disease at the age of 19," she said. "Despite his ailment, he was able to graduate in statistical mathematics from the University of Texas, and to work successfully as a scientist for Lockheed Aircraft. But eventually the cancer worsened."

Her eyes glistened but no tears fell as she recounted the long, painful years of radiation and other treatment. His white blood count fell so low that he was vulnerable to the slightest ailment. He died five years ago at the age of 42.

De Havilland hasn't acted since 1968, when she appeared as Wallis Simpson's Aunt Bessie in a TV movie, The Woman He Loved, with Anthony Andrews and Jane Seymour as the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. But she insists she is not retired.

"I have taken a long vacation," she remarked, "but I wouldn't object to a fascinating part in a first-rate project, something I felt I could do well or would understand and interpret in an effective way. Then I would say: 'Yes. The offers still come, but not what I'm looking for.'"

Meanwhile, she keeps busy seeing old friends, reading fan mail and agonizing over her autobiography, long a work in progress.

She was born to English parents in Tokyo on July 1, 1916. Before college, she appeared in a local production of A Midsummer's Night Dream, and was selected by famed director Max Reinhardt to play Hermia at the Hollywood Bowl. When Warner Bros. decided to film the play, the studio signed her to a contract. She was 20.

If Reinhardt hadn't chosen her, what might have happened to her life? "Actually I don't know what would have happened," she reflected.

"That's one reason I wanted to go to college. I looked forward to those four years tremendously. Because I had several talents, and they all gave me pleasure."

"But I didn't know what one used to call 'my true love' was. "I counted on those four years at Mills to help me find my true love. For many, many years, I thought I had taken the wrong path."

"There are so many things about the film business that are excessively stressful. And that isn't a very good way to live. So many things happen that are of deep offense to one." (AP)

The Bronx in Beersheba

By HELEN KAYE

"The business of living hasn't changed," says Hans Roth. "Troubles haven't changed. The story stays the same for us as for them."

Roth plays Bessie Berger in Clifford Odets's classic Awake and Sing (Shir Hadash in Hebrew), the Beersheba Theater's new production which opens May 31.

The Bergers are a Jewish family, and what happens to them is at the heart of this drama set in the mid-'30s, during the Depression.

Bessie is the deciding voice in this family which struggles to hold onto hope despite the bleak present. Old Jacob Berger (Shlomo Bar-Shavit) still dreams of universal brotherhood and is his grandchildren's accomplice and confidant, especially for Ralph (Hen Alon). He's the only one who doesn't know that his sister Henny (Maya Shaya) has been forced into a loveless marriage to save the family's good name when she gets pregnant. When he eventually finds out, his reaction precipitates a tragedy.

"Tragedy happens," says Roth, but adds that Odets leaves us with the hope that Henny and Ralph will attain a brighter future. "The young generation has to have hope. We can't live without it."

"The young people in the play are like my own children," agrees Bar-Shavit. "I see that hope in them." He says that he and old Jacob "have a lot of things in common. He's an optimist, an old chatterbox. I love him. I know him, so I just follow his lead."

"It doesn't matter that this play happens in the Bronx 60 years ago. We recognize ourselves in that family," says the director, actor/playwright Rami Danon. "And the family is the microcosm of the people."

Since Dr. Razi Amital became general manager of the Beersheba Theater in January, he's tried to make the repertoire more audience-friendly. Under Gadi Roll, the theater's innovative programming got critical raves, but the audience mostly stayed away in droves from shows such as Jew Süss or The Changeling.

But, apart from the fact that Awake and Sing is accessible, an American classic, "and still modern from every point of view," Amital had a special reason for choosing the play: The great American director Harold Clurman "was the original director of the play at the Group theater," he says. "He was also my teacher."

A week to remember

Entertainment highlights during the week of May 25-31:

40 years ago: The Delicate Delinquent, the first solo film by Jerry Lewis since his split from Dean Martin, had its premiere. Also premiering: Gunfight at the OK Corral, starring Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas.

The Crickets' "That'll Be the Day," with lead singer Buddy Holly, was released on the Brunswick label. And the Chas McDevitt Skiffle Group reached the US Top 40 with "Freight Train."

30 years ago: Filming ended on Guess Who's Coming to Dinner, Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn's ninth film together. It was Tracy's last film. And Barefoot in the Park, starring Jane Fonda and Robert Redford, opened at New York's Radio City Music Hall.

20 years ago: The Sex Pistols released "God Save the Queen."

It sold 150,000 copies in five days, despite being banned from leading chain stores and from daytime play by Britain's BBC Radio 1.

And Star Wars opened in theaters worldwide. The film starred Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Harrison Ford and Alec Guinness.

The film won seven Oscars for various technical achievements and for John Williams's rousing score.

10 years ago:

Legendary entertainer Bob Hope, celebrating his 84th birthday, received greetings in the form of a limerick from former secretary of state Henry Kissinger, who called the comedian "as beloved as the pope" and "more active than Oliver North."

One year ago: Film director Steven Spielberg topped Life magazine's list of the 50 most influential baby boomers. "He's our Homer and our Hans Christian Anderson," the magazine said of the director of E.T., Jurassic Park and Schindler's List.

TOWER RECORDS' TOP 15

THIS LAST WEEK'S ON	WEEK	CHARTS	ARTIST	TITLE
#1	1	15	YEHUDA POLIKER	LIVE
#2	7	39	RAMI KLEINSTEIN	COLLECTION
#3	13	2	EVAL GOLAN	WITHOUT YOU
#4	2	61	RITA	COLLECTION
#5	11	4	V/A	DOUZE POINTS
#6	9	2	SHLOMO ARTZI	TWO
#7	15	6	V/A	VOLUME 12
#8	5	10	V/A	PART TIME 3
#9	3	4	AVI PERETZ	SHALVA
#10	22	5	YUVAL BANAI	YUVAL BANAI
#11	6	28	SPICE GIRLS	SPICE
#12	17	8	AVIV GEFEN	FULL MOON
#13	NEW!	1	BLAME PRESENTS	LOGICAL PROGRESSION
#14	19	2	SUEDE	COMING UP
#15	RE	1	DEPECHE MODE	ULTRA

Tower Records' top-selling albums for last week

Selling? Buying? Hiring? Do it through the Jerusalem Post Classifieds

CALL: Tel Aviv 03-639-0333
Jerusalem 02-531-5608
With your credit card number
FAX: Tel Aviv 03-639-0277
Jerusalem 02-538-8408

BUSINESS

in brief

Bank Discount Chairman Lahav resigns

Bank Discount Chairman Gideon Lahav, after 23 years with the bank, yesterday announced his resignation from the board of directors. No reason was disclosed. Discount is scheduled to appoint its next board of directors at its regular annual meeting, on June 24, the bank announced. Jerusalem Post Staff

Sharon: Ronen land reform to be approved

The recommendations of the Ronen Committee on the reform of the Israel Lands Administration will be passed by the government with the support of the prime minister on Friday, National Infrastructure Minister Ariel Sharon said yesterday. Sharon warned that with an estimated population of eight million by 2020, Israel must spread out its population. David Harris

First quarter housing starts drop 21%

There was a 21 percent decline in the number of housing starts in the first quarter compared with the final three months of 1996, according to Central Bureau of Statistics data published yesterday. In the first three months, 10,900 constructions began, representing an 8% fall from the same period last year. David Harris

Interest rates left unchanged

By DAVID HARRIS

There will be no change in the Bank of Israel's key lending rate in June, central bank Governor Jacob Frenkel announced yesterday.

This is the third successive month without a change, leaving the key lending rate at 13.9 percent. The aggregate cut since August stands at 3.1%.

The decision was made despite the Consumer Price Index only rising by 0.7% last month, the lowest April increase in seven years.

"The decision is not made on the basis of one month's data," Frenkel said.

Several factors were taken into account, the bank said in a statement. The need to remain within the government-set 1997 inflation target of 7%-10% was once again key, and economic activity is still slow compared to its full-growth potential.

In addition, long-term M1 money supply is proving to be consistent with the inflation rate, even though there has been a relatively fast expansion in recent months.

In the long term, the bank pointed to multi-year targets for the state budget to remain within the government guidelines and the deficit not be higher than 2.8% of gross domestic product this year, with that figure decreasing each year until 2001.

There is also a need to keep on course to equal inflation rates by 2001 in Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development countries, where inflation currently averages a little over 4%.

"Achieving these aims, along with a liberalization of the financial and capital markets, is important to the strengthening of competitiveness and efficiency and renewing faith in economic policy," read the statement.

"There is certainly a consistency about the governor's actions," said Hebrew University Public Finance Prof. Eitan Sheshinski. "The question is whether the goal [of the bank] is one-dimensional in reducing inflation or whether it should take into account other economic indicators—such as growth, exports and employment. In my opinion, it cannot be one-dimensional—what must be decided is where the division is drawn [between the Treasury and the central bank]."

Sheshinski maintains the bank must make a combined move in lowering interest rates by a significant 1%-1.5%, while lifting the shekel off the bottom of the exchange rate mechanism with a revaluation of some 7% over a period of months.

"With the governor continuing his mistaken interest rates policy and refusing to lower rates, the government must force him to do so as part of a joint economic process that will save the economy from this crisis," Chambers of Commerce President Dan Gillerman said.

Also criticizing Frenkel was Manufacturers Association President Dan Propper.

In calling for a 1.5% cut in rates, Propper accused Frenkel of causing much damage to the economy, including a recession and increase in unemployment.

Gov't: El Al sale plan to be published next week

Yitzhak Levy: Workers' rights must be guaranteed

By DAVID HARRIS

The committee responsible for deciding the nature of El Al's privatization will publish its blueprint "within seven to 10 days," Transport Minister Yitzhak Levy said yesterday.

It is still unclear what form the sale will take, with differences of opinion still thought to exist between Langental and the other two committee members—Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's economics adviser Moshe Leon and Government Companies Authority Director-General Tzipi Livni.

The issue of sale by public flotation or controlling shares was not discussed during a joint sitting of the Knesset Economics and Labor and Social Affairs committees yesterday, which instead focused on the concerns of workers and the issue of operating on Shabbat.

Whatever the future of El Al, workers' rights must not be infringed in any way, said Transport Minister Yitzhak Levy.

He added that he remains staunchly opposed to any plans to operate on Shabbat. The joint Knesset committee issued a statement which recommended that the company not be privatized if the full rights of workers are not guaranteed and that there be no government discussion of the privatization until comprehensive talks have been held with employees.

Avraham Poraz (Meretz-Shinui) called for the statement to include a demand the company must operate seven days a week under private owners. However, he received no support from MKs for this proposal.

"Who will care for the workers?" asked Labor and Social Affairs Committee chairman Maxim Levy (Gesher). "Look what happened after the sale of Shekem. All the workers and management were laid off."

In response, Yitzhak Levy (NRP) told the meeting that "the operation of El Al is highly efficient, therefore we have no argument over the place and importance of workers in the company."

At this point, Poraz interrupted proceedings, shouting, "if you won't let the company fly on Shabbat, all this is a waste of time."

Turning to the issue of religion, Yitzhak Levy said he believes Shabbat is not the only crucial issue, but also that of kashrut.

"We must keep the status quo," he said. "This is not just about El Al on Shabbat, but also a doubling of traffic volume at Ben Gurion Airport."

Levy then repeated his claim that there are several religious investors prepared to run El Al without flights on Shabbat.

Speaking to The Jerusalem Post after the meeting, Yitzhak Levy said he will not accept the recommendations of the government committee if they include flying on Shabbat.

When asked if he would resign over the issue, he responded, "I don't believe it will come to that. The government will agree with me."

"The question of Shabbat is for the investors to decide," said El Al general manager Yoel Feldschu. "For many years the company did present balanced books, taking into account security costs and Shabbat."

The company reported $80 million in losses last year, the first year in the red since 1985.

"If the company remains in its current format, it will soon cease to exist," Knesset Speaker Dan Tichon said in calling for an immediate sale which includes full protection of workers'

Howard Johnson establishes Israel presence

By NICKY BLACKBURN

Howard Johnson International Inc. announced yesterday that four local hotels have joined its chain as the first stage of a Near East program.

The US-based chain, making its first appearance in Israel, also plans in the coming year to open six more hotels across the country and launch several in Cyprus, Greece, Turkey and the Palestinian Authority.

"We aim to have 15 to 20 hotels across the region by 1998," says Shlomo Groffman, chairman of the Israel Land Development Hotels Corporation, which holds the franchise for Howard Johnson in Israel.

The Israeli hotels which joined the chain yesterday are the Ruth Rimon Inn in Safed, the Galei Eilat and Neptune in Eilat, and the Galei Kinneret in Tiberias.

All the Israeli hotels at stake belong to the Israel Land Development Hotels Corp. and have been upgraded to meet Howard Johnson standards.

They will operate as franchise hotels under the company's top brand name, Howard Johnson Plaza. In return, Howard Johnson will receive an undisclosed percentage of their prospective profits.

All the hotels are in the three to five star range.

"Joining Howard Johnson is good for us," Howard Johnson Israel general manager Micky Schwartz said. "We get the brand name and the international reservations system. We are joining a large international firm with tremendous marketing power. To be a domestic hotel chain is no longer enough in today's market. The future in hotels belongs to worldwide names."

"Howard Johnson is one of the most aggressive international chains," said Groffman, former president and CEO of Africa-Israel, who was elected two weeks ago to the Howard Johnson board of directors. "It's very strong in the US and most of the businessmen and tourists coming to Israel are from America. Having Howard Johnson hotels here promises to increase the numbers of American tourists visiting Israel."

He added, however, that much depends on the political situation in Israel.

Howard Johnson, which plans eventually to open hotels throughout the Middle East—including Syria, Lebanon, Egypt and Jordan—is owned by HFS Incorporated, the New Jersey-based holding company which includes the Days Inn, Ramada and Park Inn chains, and has an annual $800 million turnover.

Two years ago HFS brought the Days Inn chain to Israel. There are now six hotels in the chain here.

South Korea agrees to give North Korea food aid. Red Cross Secretary General Lee Byung-woong (right) of South Korea and his North Korean counterpart Paek Yong-ho shake hands over the negotiating table after signing an agreement on food aid in Beijing yesterday. The officials signed the deal allowing South Korea to supply 50,000 tonnes of food aid to neighbor by the end of July. (Reuters)

Plasson mulls third attempt at IPO

Underwriter: Previous bids suffered from bad political timing

By JENNIFER FRIEDLIN

Plastics manufacturer Plasson is mulling a third attempt to float the company's shares after two previous abortive bids to go public on the London Stock Exchange, according to Roger Hornett, executive director of Societe Generale, the company that underwrote the previous initial public offerings.

Last October, the company failed in its attempt to raise £20m by issuing 25 percent of its shares on the London Stock Exchange.

Back then, arguably due to the riots following the opening of an exit for the Western Wall Tunnel, the market failed by a narrow margin to generate the minimal demand needed to meet LSE regulations.

Plasson, the country's largest plastics manufacturer and one of the world's leading companies in manufacturing connectors for polyethylene piping, first planned a share offer last June, but chose to postpone that one due to the uncertainty which followed the election of Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, Hornett said. Hornett declined to say which market Plasson would now go for or how much money the company would attempt to raise.

Plasson, Kibbutz Ma'agan Michael's main source of revenue, would have become the first kibbutz company to go public.

After riots erupted in the territories following the opening of the tunnel exit, several British, German, French and Italian companies decided to cancel their orders for Plasson shares, leaving Societe Generale with too few orders for all the shares Plasson had to offer.

Today, the continuance of the peace process is much more certain, giving foreign investors more confidence in local companies, Hornett said.

"Today we know something that we did not know back in October; whether there is a dove or a hawk in office, the peace process is going to go on," he said.

Hornett was in Israel yesterday as part of a roadshow for Comfy Interactive Movies Ltd., a developer of hardware and software for children. Comfy is planning to issue a prospectus for its Tel Aviv-based IPO on Thursday.

The company, which will hold the offering next week, hopes to raise $29.3m based on a pre-IPO valuation of $73.3m. Comfy's sales totalled $3.8m last year.

Hornett said the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange is the appropriate exchange for Comfy, because the company's products are most familiar to Israeli customers and that other markets are problematic.

"Only two out of the nine Israeli companies on [London's Alternative Investment Market] are trading at a premium, Nasdaq is too expensive, and there is a danger that the high-tech index will collapse at some point," Hornett said.

Comfy's major shareholders include Shamrock Holdings, Dovrat-Shrem & Co., the Investment Company of Bank Hapoalim, Trust Company of the Maritime Bank and Cowen & Co.

Societe Generale supported Israel's 1995 IPO and underwrote Israel Discount Bank's public issuance, which was three times oversubscribed.

"These rates vary according to bank. SOURCE: BANK LEUMI

COMPANY RESULTS

Zim slips into red; Clal Ind. net sharply down

By JENNIFER FRIEDLIN

Zim Israel Navigation Company Ltd. slipped into the red in the first quarter, posting losses of $12.8 million, compared with net gains of $2.1m. in the same period last year.

Revenue dropped slightly to $336.1m. from $336.2m.

The company attributed the results to continued fierce competion in all the company's trade areas. To meet the demands of the marketplace, the company said it is expanding its strategic alliances with different shipping companies that operate in the same trade areas, as well as increasing its marketing, sales and service efforts.

Clal Industries reported first-quarter net income dropped 58 percent to NIS 30.1m. from NIS 70.9m. in the same period last year. Revenues fell to NIS 3.05 billion from NIS 3.23b.

The holding company attributed the drop in income to a reduction in productivity in its energy, electronics, paper and textile divisions.

The company said its building materials enterprises remained stable, while its food division is currently restructuring.

Clal Industries previously announced its intention to sell off unprofitable holdings in an attempt to focus on core businesses. Clal (Israel) Ltd. owns 68.5% of Clal Industries.

Elco Holdings Ltd. reported first-quarter net earnings plummeted to NIS 9.37m. from NIS 23.77m. in the same period last year. Revenues for the quarter fell to NIS 711.54m. from NIS 895.18m.

The company, which is Israel's third largest multi-industry holding company after Clal Industries and Koor Industries, owns 77% of Elco Industries Ltd., 61% of Electra (Israel) Ltd., 78% of Electra Consumer Products and 44% of Shekem Ltd.

DON'T BE LEFT OUT!
If you don't have e-mail or even a computer you can still advertise!

INTERNET POST CLASSIFIEDS
Reach all of Israel and the world for just:

- For Two weeks $19 US Dollars/NIS 45
- One Month $25 US Dollars/NIS 88
- Two Months $45 US Dollars/NIS 158
- Three Months $70 US Dollars/NIS 245
- Six Months $130 US Dollars/NIS 458

Maximum 30 words
List category and sub-category.

Message _____

Don't forget your contact address /phone /fax /e-mail in your message.

Fax this form: In US & Canada, 212-599-4743
In Israel & the rest of the world: 972-2-531-5622 or place your ad directly on our web site at <http://www.ipost.co.il>

Name _____
Address _____
Credit Card No. _____
Exp. date _____ Card type _____
Tel No. _____ Fax No. _____
e-mail address _____

NO TELEPHONE SUBMISSIONS

"A fax for you"
All you want to know about your accounts, on your fax, within 15 minutes.

ISRAEL DISCOUNT BANK

SELLING YOUR CAR?

The Jerusalem Post's Quality Classifieds offer you several possibilities to achieve your goal.

Payment possible by credit card.

Call today!
Tel Aviv, Tel. 03-639 0333
Jerusalem, Tel. 02-531 5608

ISRAEL MONEY MARKETS

Patrah (foreign currency deposit rates) (11.9.96)

Currency (deposit for)	3 MONTHS	6 MONTHS	12 MONTHS
U.S. dollar ($250,000)	4.750	5.000	5.375
Pound sterling (£100,000)	3.875	4.000	4.250
German mark (DM 200,000)	1.925	1.825	2.125
Swiss franc (SF 200,000)	0.825	0.750	1.000
Yen (10 million yen)	—	—	—

(Rates vary higher or lower than indicated according to deposit)

Shekel Foreign Exchange Rates* (23.5.97)

CURRENCY AND TRANSFERS	CHECKS AND BANKNOTES		Rep. Rates
	Buy	Sell
Currency basket	3.6723	3.7318	3.7041
U.S. dollar	2.3688	3.4232	1.95
German mark	1.8917	2.0228	3.48
Pound sterling	5.4855	5.6720	5.38
French franc	0.5912	0.8008	0.58
Japanese yen (100)	2.9083	2.9553	2.85
Dutch guilder	1.7715	1.8004	1.74
Swiss franc	2.3923	2.4312	2.25
Swedish krona	0.4438	0.4508	0.43
Norwegian krona	0.4775	0.4885	0.48
Danish krone	0.5229	0.5314	0.51
Finnish mark	0.8594	0.8701	0.84
Canadian dollar	2.4468	2.4535	2.53
Australian dollar	2.5839	2.6258	2.53
S. African rand	0.7533	0.7655	0.68
Belgian franc (10)	0.9847	0.9903	0.84
Austrian schilling (10)	2.8304	2.8761	2.76
Italian lira (1000)	3.8828	3.9455	3.82
Jordanian dinar	4.7515	4.8282	4.89
Egyptian pound	0.8600	1.0400	0.98
ECU	3.8828	5.1759	5.01
Irish punt	5.0937	5.1759	5.04
Spanish peseta (100)	2.3820	2.4001	2.32

*These rates vary according to bank. Bank of Israel, SOURCE: BANK LEUMI

Key Representative Rates

US DollarNIS 3.3980
SterlingNIS 5.5306
MarkNIS 2.0093

Lebanese growth rate slows to five-year low

BEIRUT (Reuters) - A leading Beirut bank signalled yesterday that Lebanon's economic growth fell in the first quarter of 1997 to its lowest level since billionaire Prime Minister Rafik Hariri took office nearly five years ago.

Banque Audi said in its quarterly economic report that growth fell not only below the four percent annual rate recorded last year but also below the 3% registered in the first quarter of 1996.

"Growth in the first quarter of 1997 slowed down significantly in terms of annual rates, it fell from the 4% reported in 1996," the report said. "Internal sources of growth appeared to have run dry. Consumption was sluggish and investment fell."

In a break with its usual practice, Banque Audi did not give a figure for first quarter growth. However, it referred to "relative stagnation" in comparison with the first quarter of 1996, when it reported growth at 3%.

A rate of less than 3% would be the lowest Lebanon has experienced since Hariri took over in October 1992, with a mandate to rebuild the country after the 1975-90 civil war.

It would compare with a growth target of 10% a year set in Hariri's multi-billion dollar reconstruction program.

According to Banque Audi, estimated GDP growth was 8% in 1994, 7% in 1995 and 4% in 1996.

Banque Audi said sluggish consumption and disappointing demand in the first quarter resulted from "depression in the political and business environments" and the cumulative effects of the government's adjustment policies.

Industry continued to sell off stocks and investment fell, it said.

"Compared to the first quarter of 1996, both public and private investment decreased, according to our estimates, by almost 14% in nominal value, thus negatively affecting growth and confirming the slowing down of activity."

Other negative indicators included a continued decline in the growth of bank loans to the private sector and deterioration of the state's debt ratios.

Banque Audi also cited a 59.67% budget deficit in the first quarter, compared with a planned shortfall of 36%.

Roche purchases Boehringer Mannheim in $11b. deal

ZURICH (Reuters) - Swiss pharmaceuticals group Roche Holding Ltd yesterday announced plans to acquire the diagnostics and pharmaceuticals company Boehringer Mannheim Group in a deal valued at $11 billion.

It said the move would make Roche the market leader in the global diagnostics business.

The agreement calls for Roche to purchase all the shares of Bermuda-based Corange Ltd, the sole owner of the diagnostics and pharmaceuticals business of Boehringer Mannheim Group.

Corange also holds 84.2 percent of shares in DePuy, Inc., a Delaware-based manufacturer of orthopedic products.

Roche said in a statement that it entered into the agreement with the owners of Corange on May 24.

The acquisition must still be approved by the relevant regulatory authorities, Roche said in its statement.

"This acquisition enables Roche to attain yet another of its strategic goals, to become a leader in the diagnostics systems and products sector in terms of sales and profitability," Roche Chairman Fritz Gerber said in the statement.

World Bank pledges $24.8 million to upgrade Hanoi road system

A Vietnamese laborer loads sacks full of gravel on a downtown Hanoi roadside. The World Bank has pledged $24.8 million to upgrade the capital's shabby road system and restore order to its treacherous streets, where more than 1,500 have already died this year.

TASE ROUNDUP

Drop expected today after rates left unchanged

Mishtanim	Maof
271.14 ▲ 0.03%	279.42 ▲ 0.03%

By ROBERT DANIEL

Stock indexes were little changed as investors waited to see if the Bank of Israel cuts interest rates, which would reduce corporate borrowing costs and make stocks more attractive relative to interest rate-linked investments.

After the market closed, Bank of Israel Governor Jacob Frenkel announced that the central bank would leave its benchmark rate at 13.9 percent. Analysts, who had expected either a cut of as much as 0.3 percentage point or no change, said prices on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange would drop tomorrow.

"People will sell [today], but [the decision] won't influence things dramatically," said Gidi Halpern, a portfolio manager at Tel Aviv investment firm Meitav Ltd. "The market is very strong, and the interest rate decision won't affect specific companies which are going up."

The Maof Index of 25 most-traded issues rose 0.03 percent to 279.42, and the Mishtanim Index of 100 issues also added 0.03% to 271.14. Both indexes are at record levels.

Declining shares included Bank Leumi, the second-largest bank by assets, and Blue Square Investments and Properties Ltd., a supermarket operator, down 2% and 2.5% to 5.29 and 37.78 respectively.

Gainers included holding companies Clal Industries Ltd. and Koor Industries Ltd., up 2.25% and 2.75% to 305.76 and 18.06. Investors are watching "three major events this week," said Ron Weisberg, analyst at Israel Brokerage and Investments. They are the central bank's rate decision, the government's sale of Bank Leumi shares, and expirations of options on the Maof Index Thursday.

"There's pressure on Bank Leumi to people wait to see how the offering will go," said Dan Afi, a broker at Tel Aviv firm Nesuah Trading.

The most-active issue was Bank Leumi, trading NIS 11.3m. of shares.

Across the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange, NIS 123.6m. of shares traded. Six issues rose for every five that declined.

Bank Hapoalim, also high on the government's list of holdings it wants to shed, was unchanged at 7.11.

Discount Bank slipped 0.75% to 3.68 as it reported first-quarter net income fell 5.8%.

Koor, which has interests in building materials, telecommunications equipment, said it is considering increasing a planned bond issue by 50% to $300m.

Clal Industries, with investments in telecommunications, electronic equipment, computers and other fields, reported first-quarter net income fell 57% on 11% lower revenue.

Developer Azorim Investment, Development & Construction Co. slipped 0.25% as it reported first-quarter profit fell 4.5% on 4.3% higher revenue.

Department-store chain Shektem Ltd. was unchanged at 1.205. (Bloomberg)

DATA COMMUNICATIONS VIA ABA COMPUTER SYSTEMS LIMITED
 TRADING, MAINTENANCE & SUPPORT

Foreign financial data courtesy of CommStock Trading Ltd.

Futures, Options, Stocks, Bonds and Mutual Funds

34 Ben Yehuda St., Jerusalem
 Tel. 02-624-4963, 02-575-9826/27
 Fax. 02-625-9515

Tel Aviv shares data supplied by Pacific Mediterranean Investments, Tel. 09-958-5873. All other data supplied by Commstock Trading Ltd., Tel. 02-624-4963. Due to technical failures data may be inaccurate. The Jerusalem Post will not be held responsible for the consequences of any transaction made on the basis of these data. Readers who wish to report missing or misquoted data should do so on postcards only, addressed to Jerusalem Post Business Desk, P.O.B. 81, Jerusalem 91000

P A C
 M E D INVESTMENTS

Catch the Early Bird!

Doing Business in Israel?

Advertise in our business column without delay. For details, contact The Jerusalem Post.

New UK trade chief in Japan for car talks

TOKYO (Reuters) - Britain's new trade chief Margaret Beckett, choosing Japan for her first foreign trip since the Labor Party won power, yesterday plunged into the competition for Japanese carmakers' business in Europe.

On the first day of a three-day visit, Beckett met the heads of Toyota, Honda and Nissan and beat the drum for her new Britain as a gateway for Japanese companies into the European market.

British officials said neither the carmakers nor Beckett had specific proposals to consider and the meetings were more to lay the groundwork for a comfortable trade relationship between Japan and the new Labor government.

"Beckett was keen to stress that there is a strong relationship between Britain and Japan and we want that to continue," one official said.

However the underlying message was that Labor was strongly committed to a European single market and the days of a threat to Britain being used as a manufacturing base for Europe from "Euro-sceptic" conservatives were over.

New Zealand's Fernz deals Rhone-Poulenc strategic blow

WELLINGTON (Reuters) - New Zealand's Fernz Corporation has dealt French chemicals goliath Rhone-Poulenc a strategic blow in a battle for control of a burgeoning agri-chemicals market, managing director Kerry Hoggard said.

Hoggard said yesterday he expects Rhone-Poulenc will probably sell its 32 percent stake in industrial chemicals group Compagnie Francaise des Produits Industriels (CFPI) after Fernz bought the founding Hess family's shares last week.

Buying the strategic 17% stake took Fernz's total equity holding in CFPI to 45.14%, and Hoggard said he did not believe Rhone-Poulenc would now retain its minority holding.

"I don't think either company is in a situation where they're going to sit there with a minority position on a long-term basis," he said.

Fernz intends to launch a takeover bid for the remaining shares at FR 380 per share. The offer values all of CFPI at NZ$139 million (US$96m.). Rhone-Poulenc indicated as recently as last November it was interested in taking control of CFPI. While it is still possible for Rhone to make a counterbid, Hoggard was confident Fernz will secure control of CFPI at its offer price.

Fernz has been wrestling Rhone, the seventh largest pharmaceutical and chemical group in the world, for control of CFPI because it is the key to the international market for agricultural chemical bromoxynil.

Bromoxynil is used as a herbicide to protect small and coarse grains. Rhone supplies about 80% of the bromoxynil market worldwide, and a takeover of CFPI, which holds the remaining 20%, would have given it total control of the product.

That could have had implications for Fernz, because it supplies 80% of the world market for MCPA, another agricultural chemical which is used almost exclusively in conjunction with bromoxynil, Hoggard explained.

If Fernz succeeded in taking control of CFPI it would be in a stronger position to work with Rhone to distribute sales of both products.

Hoggard said Fernz had identified CFPI as a takeover target 12 months ago because of its involvement in the agricultural and industrial chemicals businesses internationally.

He said that within CFPI's NZ$370m. annual turnover, 45% was from agricultural chemical sales and 55% from industrial chemical sales.

Fernz's business is now solely focused on those two areas following the company's exit last week from its direct investment in fertilizer production.

"We've been building an international agricultural chemicals operation for the last five years," Hoggard said. "What we're endeavoring to do as part of that strategy is to take positions in certain key strategic chemicals which are important in the international marketplace."

Hoggard said Fernz was looking at further acquisitions, including an international agricultural chemicals company and two Australian industrial chemical operations, one of which was in New Zealand.

Fernz posted a NZ$43.5m. (US$30m.) profit in the year to May 31, 1996. Rhone-Poulenc's 1996 net income was FR 2.74 billion (US$484m.).

WORLD MARKET ROUNDUP

Tokyo shares end up

TOKYO - Tokyo stocks closed marginally higher yesterday, helped by a buying of a limited number of issues, backed partly by solid corporate earnings reports. Market participants were still cautious over the currency market and Wall Street stocks.

The 225-share Nikkei average gained 34.50 points to finish the session at 20,043.50.

HONG KONG - Hong Kong's Hang Seng Index soared to a record closing high on record turnover as overseas money continued to flow in looking to snap up big cap stocks and red chips. The blue-chip index rose 242.96 points to close at 14,574.64, a touch off the intra-day high of 14,581.35.

FRANKFURT - German shares shrugged off early nerves following the unexpected left-wing victory in the French parliamentary elections to surge to fresh record highs in bourse trade, albeit on thin volumes.

The blue chip DAX index surged past old records to the bourse session up 55.67 points at 3,657.86 points. In post-bourse trade the DAX stood at 3,669.31 up 47.59 points.

WHERE TO GO

Notices in this feature are charged at NIS 28.00 per line, including VAT. Insertion every day of the month, costs NIS 520.00 per line, including VAT, per month.

JERUSALEM
 Conductor's Tours
 HEBREW UNIVERSITY, Tours of the Mount Scopus campus, in English, daily Sun.-Thur., 11 a.m. from Bronman Reception Center, Sherman Administration Bldg. Buses 40, 9, 23, 26, 28. For info, call 58828219.

HADASSAH Visit the Hadassah installations, Chagall Windows. Tel. 02-6416333, 02-6776771.

TEL AVIV

Museums
 TEL AVIV MUSEUM, Andrea Serrano: The Morgue. Soviet Photography from the Museum collection. Luciano Freud: selection of works. Tzvi Hecker: Sunflower. Portraits: By a group of Israeli artists. Virtual Reality: The domestic and realistic in contemporary Israeli art. HELENA RUBINSTEIN PAVILION FOR CONTEMPORARY ART, Shlomo Ben-David and Amnon Ben-David. The Inverted Campaign. Hours: Weekdays 10 a.m.-6 p.m., Tue. 10 a.m.-10 p.m., Fri. 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Meyerhoff Art Education Center, Tel. 9919156-8.

HAIFA
 WHAT'S ON IN HAIFA, dial 04-8374253.

GENERAL ASSISTANCE

EMERGENCY PHARMACIES
 Jerusalem: Shomesh Pharm., 42 Agrippas, 624-6484; Balesam, Salah St., Din, 627-2315; Shualat, Shualat Road, 581-0108; Dar Alawa, Hero's Gate, 628-2058.

Tel Aviv: Pharma Dal Jabotinsky, 125 Ion Givoli, 548-2040; Superpharm, 40 Einstein, 841-3730; London Minisuperpharm, 4 Shaul Hamelech, 698-0115.

Rafanana-Kfar Sava: Kupat Holim Meccol, 49 Hahayil, Rafanana, 740-7738.

Netanya: Center Pharm, 1 King David, 884-1531.

Haifa: Hanassi, 33 Hanassi, 833-3312.

Krayot areas: Pentagon, 4 Hagdud Ramat Hashikma, 871-1490.

Herzliya: Clal Pharm., Beit Herzliya, 6 Maslik (nr. Sdrot Haggalim), Herzliya Pituah, 955-9472, 955-8407, Open 9 a.m. to midnight.

Upper Nazareth: Clal Pharm., Lev Ha'ir Mall, 657-0468, Open 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

DUTY HOSPITALS
 Jerusalem: Bikur Holim (Internal, obstetrics); Shaare Zedek (surgery, ENT); Hadassah Ein Kerem (orthopedics, pediatrics, ophthalmology).
 Tel Aviv: Tel Aviv Medical Center Dana Pediatric Hospital (pediatrics); Tel Aviv Medical Center (Internal, surgery).
 Netanya: Laniado.

POLICE 100
FIRE 102
FIRST AID 101
 Magen David Adom

In emergencies dial 101 (Hebrew) or 911 (English) in most parts of the country. In addition:
 In emergencies dial 101 (Hebrew) or 911 (English) in most parts of the country. In addition:
 In emergencies dial 101 (Hebrew) or 911 (English) in most parts of the country. In addition:
 Ashdod: 8551333
 Be'er Sheva: 851333
 Beer Sheva: 8274787
 Ben Shimon: 6232133
 Dan Region: 5763333
 Eilat: 6332444
 Haifa: 8512223
 Jerusalem: 6521133
 Karmiel: 8885444
 Netanya: 9012222
 Nahariya: 9012233
 Netanya: 8604444
 Petah Tikva: 8811111
 Rehovot: 9451333
 Rishon: 9422333
 Sderot: 9822233
 Tel Aviv: 5481111
 Tiberias: 6782444

Mobile Intensive Care Unit (MICU) service in the area, around the clock.

Medical help for tourists (in English) 177-022-9110

The National Poison Control at Rambam Hospital 04-852-8205, 24 hours a day, for information in case of poisoning.

Erin - Emotional First Aid - 1201, also Jerusalem 561-0303, Tel Aviv 546-1111 (children/youth 546-0730).

Rambam Hospital 956-986112, Haifa 867-2222, Beer Sheva 648-4333, Netanya 862-5110, Karmiel 888-8770, Kfar Sava 767-4555, Hadera 834-6789, Crisis Center for Religious Women 02-555-5744/5, 24-hour service, confidentiality guaranteed.

Wizo hotlines for battered women 02-6514111, 03-546-1133 (also in Russian).

Tel Aviv: 02-637-6310, 08-955-0506 (also in Amharic).

Rafanana Crisis Center (24 hours), Tel Aviv 523-4819, 544-0181 (Hebrew).

Jerusalem 825-5658, Haifa 853-0633, Eilat 833-1977.

Hadassah Medical Organization - Israel Cancer Association support service 02-624-7878).

LAST CHANGE		LAST CHANGE		LAST CHANGE
Clal Israel 1	1055 0.5	KDC	1820 1.2	Packer Steel	8640 0.0
Clal Finance	1230 0.7	Mid Bridge	330 0.0	Petrol	1570 0.0
Clal Storage 5	8910 0.0	Israel Chemicals	390 0.0	Petrochemicals	2200 0.0
Dead Sea Works 0.1	1140 2.0	Israel Corp. 1	2050 0.5	Prochem Int. 1	477 0.0
Dalek 0.1	1070 0.8	Israel Corp. 5	874 1.0	Prochem Int.	1435 0.0
Dalek 0.1	540 0.0	Jermanco	3.8 0.0	Purp & Day	390 1.2
Development Mort	270 0.0	JSC	1880 1.0	Prog & Day	2970 0.0
Discount 01	42 0.2	Kardian 5	1930 0.0	Repsol	715 0.0
Discount Bank	380 0.0	Koor Bond 5	470 2.8	Shchem	125 0.0
Discount Int.	9775 0.0	Koor Bond 5	30570 2.0	Shchem	370 0.0
Eilat	850 1.0	Leumi Insurance	228 0.0	Shchem	125 0.0
Eilat System	2042 0.2	Leumi Insurance	228 0.0	Sinclair	370 0.0
Elon	2770 0.2	Leumi Insurance	228 0.0	TAP	185 0.0
Elon 0.002	15940 0.3	Mafim	2791 4.0	TAT 5	185 0.0
Elon 0.002	2610 0.7	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	927 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4411 0.8	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	1250 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	6257 0.0	Mafim 5	2560 3.7	Tel Aviv	845 0.0
Elon 0.002	4

SPORTS

in brief

Crystal Palace promoted to premier league

LONDON (Reuters) - Crystal Palace will play in the English premier league next season after they beat Sheffield United 1-0 (half-time 0-0) in the first division promotion play-off final at Wembley yesterday.

David Hopkins scored the winning goal in the 90th minute in front of a crowd of 64,383.

Canadiens name Vigneault as new head coach

MONTREAL (Reuters) - The Montreal Canadiens yesterday named Alain Vigneault their new head coach and hired former Calgary Flames coach Dave King as his top assistant.

Canadiens general manager Rejean Houle announced that former junior league head coach Vigneault had signed a three-year contract for the most pressure-packed post in the National Hockey League.

The Canadiens, the most successful team in the history of the NHL with 23 championships, have not won a playoff series since winning the Stanley Cup in 1993.

Woosnam wins British PGA by two strokes

WENTWORTH, England (Reuters) - Ian Woosnam of Britain overcame a faltering start before setting down on the back nine to win the British PGA title with a two-under-par final round of 70 yesterday.

The Welsh Ryder Cup veteran won by two strokes for his second victory in the championship after tasting success in 1988. He also took the World Matchplay title twice on the same course in 1987 and 1990.

South African Ernie Els and Nick Faldo of Britain both birdied the final hole for rounds of 70 to create a three-way tie for second with Irishman Darren Clarke, who could only par the long closing hole for a 71.

Ballesteros considering back operation

WENTWORTH, England (Reuters) - European Ryder Cup captain Seve Ballesteros said yesterday he may drop out of this week's Tournament Players Championship because of a sore back and might even consider surgery.

Ballesteros, who withdrew from this weekend's British PGA Championship at Wentworth before the start of Friday's second round said he would make a decision on the Hamburg tournament later this week.

Dropping out of the PGA had already cost the 40-year-old Spaniard the chance of a lucrative haul of Ryder Cup points in his bid to be the playing captain in the September match against the Americans at Valderrama.

Nastase, Tiriac given key federation posts

BUCHAREST (Reuters) - Ilie Nastase and Ion Tiriac, Romania's top two tennis players in the 1970s, have been given key posts in the country's tennis federation.

"Romanian tennis wants Nastase and Tiriac as its main decision men...to help rebuild a powerful set-up in our country," federation general secretary Lucian Vasiliu said yesterday.

Nastase has been chosen as the federation's executive president, while Tiriac was elected as honorary president for life.

Almost half of Bundesliga may play in Europe

BONN (Reuters) - Almost half of the German first division could be playing in European club competitions next season.

Newly-crowned champions Bayern Munich and second-placed Bayer Leverkusen secured their places in the Champions' League in a decisive round of action at the weekend.

At the moment European Cup finalists Borussia Dortmund, VfB Stuttgart, Bochum and defending champions Schalke will play in the UEFA Cup.

If Stuttgart win the German Cup final and Dortmund clinch this week's European Cup final, the teams in sixth and seventh places in the 18-strong Bundesliga - presently 1860 Munich and Karlsruhe with one game remaining - will take their UEFA Cup places.

Dortmund would then play in the Champions' League and Stuttgart in the European Cup Winners' Cup.

Rain postpones Indianapolis 500 again

INDIANAPOLIS (Reuters) - For the second successive day, the 81st running of the Indianapolis 500 was postponed after heavy rain soaked the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The race, which was originally scheduled for Sunday, did get underway on Monday, but was halted after 15 of the 200 laps had been run.

After a rain delay of some three hours, the decision was made to again postpone the race until tomorrow at noon, weather permitting.

Sports Editors: Joseph Hoffman and Ori Lewis

Hap. Beersheba wrest State Cup from Maccabi Tel Aviv

By DEREK FATTAI

Hapoel Beersheba captured the State Cup for the first time in its history last night with a hard-fought 1-0 victory over Maccabi Tel Aviv at the National Stadium in Ramat Gan.

There was precious little constructive football on display for the 25,000 crowd, but nevertheless the game was decided by a single moment of brilliance. It came three minutes before half-time when Beersheba's man-of-the-match, Giovanni Rosset, met a well-flighted corner with a startling overhead kick that careered off the far post and into goal.

The result salvaged Beersheba's season, and takes the club into its third-ever venture into Europe, by way of a place in the preliminary rounds of the Cup Winners' Cup.

Meanwhile Maccabi supporters will be left pondering through the summer how their side has fallen from its double-winning success to relative ignominy in just twelve short months.

Both sides stressed defense over attack, and the southerners clearly maintained the upper hand throughout as their central unit of Alexander Solov and Sharon Buchnik met every assault that Avi Nimni and his cohorts tried to mount, with a wall of steel.

The Tel Avivians, usually need little firing up on the big occasion, but on the night Avraham Grant's men simply failed to get their game together as the Beershebans challenged in every meter of the field making even simple pass options difficult for the former Cup-holders.

The first score for Maccabi came in the tenth minute when a crafty pass by Siad Halilovic sent Liron Bassis tearing towards goal only to be stopped in his tracks when Tel Aviv goalkeeper Alexander Obarov dived at his feet. The Beersheba players could hardly contain themselves when referee Amit Klein dismissed their penalty appeals but Klein was in good position to make a correct judgment.

Ten minutes later, the southerners had the good fortune to see a Gadi Brumer screamer released from over 30 meters from goal shave the crossbar and fly off to safety.

As the first half wore on, Hapoel's self-confidence increased as Shai Holtzman stretched and pulled the Tel Aviv defense out of position. When it came, Beersheba's goal was certainly the result of lax defending by Maccabi, but its wonderful execution fully entitled the Cup to be taken back to the Negev.

Once the goal was under their belts, Beersheba's confidence grew. A string of substitutions during the second half by both teams did little to change the balance of power. Tel Aviv's sense of desperation was etched in the face of veteran Nir Klinger which seemed to acknowledge his own impotency against the barrage of tackles that met him every time he sought to close in on the Beersheba area.

A mess in the Beersheba area in the 88th minute almost let in Maccabi's Ofer Mizrahi, but his diving header skewed over Avi Peretz's bar. At the other end substitute Oren Sagron had an opportunity to make it 2-0 seconds before the final whistle.

The final moments of the game were symbolized by Radio Darom's commentator Moshe Nir. Sporting an authentic Barcelona FC hat, his commentary to the few Negev souls who could not get to the game or even in front of a television set bordered on the hysterical, particularly when Beersheba captain Shavit Elmuelech went up to collect the glittering trophy from President Ezer Weizman.

The irony was clear, Barca being the team which annihilated Beersheba 12-0 on aggregate in their last European sortie two seasons ago. That memory was finally erased yesterday, the day the out-of-towners came to the big Orange and left with the spoils and the chance of another continental fling.

Teams: Hapoel Beersheba: Gil Peretz, Gadi Hamud, Alexander Solov, Sharon Buchnik, Shimon Elton, Chavotai Rosso, Stav Elkemeh, Siad Halilovic (Shimon Vakana 80), Dudu Iferen, Liron Bassis (Oren Sagron 66), Shai Holtzman (Sharon Aviram 73).

Maccabi Tel Aviv: Alexander (Oshava, Amir Shleish, Gadi Brumer, Alon Brumer, Guy Nachman, Nir Klinger, Nasser Shomari, Avi Nimni, Itaim Itaiji (Guy Tishler 83), Ofer Mizrahi, Eli Dertis (Domagoj Kadic, 82).

Sampras at home as European rivals stutter in Paris

PARIS (Reuters) - Europe's long list of clay court specialists were upstaged by world No. 1 Pete Sampras yesterday as the French Open unfolded in some intriguing directions at a sun-baked Roland Garros.

Top seed Sampras gave one of the most authoritative displays of his up-and-down career on clay to beat local hope Fabrice Santoro 6-3, 7-5, 6-1, a performance which suggests he could yet collect the only grand slam title he has not won.

The American openly admits the slower surface remains a struggle for him but, ironically, spent the tournament's first day looking much more at home than several of his rivals with supposedly genuine feet of clay.

Thomas Muster, once the undisputed "King of Clay" and French champion two years ago, was pushed to the brink of first-round disaster by Germany's Marc Kevin Goellner, only to squeeze through 4-6, 7-6, 6-2, 6-7, 6-4 after trailing 4-2 in the final set.

There was no escape, however, for Alberto Berasategui of Spain, a finalist in 1994 and seeded 12th this time. He was forced to retire in the fifth set of his match against Andrei Medvedev with cramp, while another of the so-called "Spanish Armada" Carlos Moya also had a rougher-than-expected time.

The ninth seed, a finalist at this year's Australian Open, was locked at two sets all with compatriot Alberto Martin when bad light halted play for the day, leaving him facing a struggle to justify his pre-tournament status as one of the men to watch.

Any complacency amongst the clay-court experts had long since been swept away by Sampras who was ultimately able to make an awkward-looking match appear relatively simple.

Santoro had beaten recent French champions Thomas Muster and

IN HER STRIDE - Mary Pierce beat Tatiana Panova of Russia 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 and was then jeered off court by the Roland Garros crowd, who have found it difficult to get to like the Frenchwoman.

Sergi Bruguera this year but was never allowed into his stride by an opponent who did not look like a player without a prior win on clay this year.

A big crowd indicated what French spectators thought might happen but once Sampras had taken the first set in 32 minutes he grew steadily in confidence and gave his opponent no room for manoeuvre.

The only real wobble came in the eighth game when a nifty backhand gave the 57th-ranked Santoro a break point for 5-3 but his failure to take advantage cost him dear.

Defending champion Yevgeny Kafelnikov, back after missing three months of the year with a broken finger, expressed cautious optimism following his 6-2, 6-4, 6-4 success over Martin Damm of the Czech Republic.

The basing center court crowd were so quiet the Russian was unsure if they knew who he was but the third seed is determined to remind them of his talents in the coming days.

"I was looking in a magazine yesterday and saw my chances rated at two percent," smiled Kafelnikov. "I just want to prove I'm not as bad as everyone thinks."

In the women's singles, three-time French champion Monica Seles attracted only five reporters to her post-match news conference after beating Japan's Miho Saeki 6-0, 6-3, an indication of the shift in power in the women's game since Martina Hingis's emergence.

The love-hate relationship between Mary Pierce and her French public also took an unexpected turn when she was jeered off court after a scrambled 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 win over Russian Tatiana Panova.

"I don't notice things like that any more. I play for myself and I consider this event just like any other tournament," sniffed Pierce.

Sixteen-year-old American Venus Williams enjoyed herself much more, making a striking impression on her French Open debut.

Despite a shimmering silver tennis dress and strings of white-beaded beads, Venus seemed destined to vanish from sight when she lost a second set tie-break to Japan's Naoko Sawamatsu.

Instead, she dug in to win 6-2, 6-7, 7-5 in two hours 37 minutes.

Flyers beat Rangers to earn Stanley Cup Finals berth

PHILADELPHIA (Reuters) - Rod Brind'Amour scored twice, including the go-ahead goal, to return the Philadelphia Flyers to the Stanley Cup Finals for the first time in a decade with a 4-2 victory over the New York Rangers Sunday.

Eric Lindros and John LeClair added power-play tallies for the Flyers, who won the last three games to take the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals 4-1. Philadelphia will play the winner of the Western Conference series between Colorado and Detroit in the Stanley Cup Finals.

Goalie Ron Hextall, who won the Conn Smythe Trophy during the Flyers' last trip to the Stanley Cup Finals in 1987, turned aside 17 shots. He won the final three contests after replacing Garth Snow in the second period of Game 2.

The veteran Rangers were game but outstayed by the Flyers, and crippled by injury throughout the series.

"Injuries did us in," said Rangers coach Colin Campbell.

"The team that stays healthy makes it to the championship. We didn't stay healthy and the Flyers did." Asked when he knew the Flyers were in trouble, Campbell said: "Probably before the game started when Brian Leetch skated out after receiving a needle. Bruce Driver, Doug Lidster and Wayne (Gretzky) all received needles."

Brind'Amour capped a wild first period when he grabbed a loose puck in the low slot, faked Mike Richter and slid a backhander between the goaltender's pads for his ninth playoff goal.

Philadelphia limited the Rangers to two shots in the second period, then dodged a bullet early in the third when Gretzky came out from behind the net and flicked a backhand shot off the right goalpost.

Brind'Amour got his fourth goal of the series at 6:43 to provide the Flyers with insurance. He won a facoff deep in the Rangers' zone and fed the puck back to Chris Therien at the left point. Richter got his left pad on Therien's slap shot, but Brind'Amour chipped in the rebound to make it 4-2.

LOCAL SCENE

Amit Inbar in fine fettle

By HEATHER CHAIT

Amit Inbar is making his comeback. Inbar, pushed out of the limelight by Olympic medalist Gal Friedman, won an international windsurfing competition in the Netherlands last week.

Inbar's results in his nine sails were 3, 3, 1, 1, 2, 1, 12, 11 and 7 which gave him the gold medal. Friedman ended in fifth place.

The new Inbar, addicted to yoga and a strict diet after his trip to India, has now qualified for the world and European windsurfing championships.

Basketball: The national women's basketball team has reached next year's semi-finals of the European Championships, even after losing their last game 68-65 in the preliminary rounds to hosts Portugal.

In the last game, Israel had to lose by no more than 17 points to advance as the second place finishers, along with first placed Croatia.

During the tournament Israel lost to Croatia 83-72 but won the other games, against the Netherlands, Switzerland and Ireland.

Athletics: Triple-jumper Avi Tyrie, now over last year's injury, is hungry for action. At his first competition this year at Hagar Yosef on the weekend, he jumped the minimum distance for the world championships in Athens in August.

Tyrie's jump was 16.94 meters, 10 centimeters more than the minimum requirement. Rogel Nahum, already assured of his ticket to Athens, also jumped 16.94.

In the pole vault event, where Israel also has two international athletes, Danny Krasnov managed 5.50m while Konstantin Simyonev settled for 5.40m.

Tali Greener smashed the women's pole vault distance no less than three times at one meet. Her previous record which had stood at 3.20m, went to 3.26m, then 3.30m and landed at 3.35m.

Golf: This week's competition at Caesarea Golf Club was an alliance best-ball stableford. Helping Cyril Kaufman to win with a 13 better than par, 121 strokes, were his wife Norma, and his brother, Basil, together with Judy Reefe.

Four strokes behind were Leslie Ben-Amir, Dick Fogelson and Mike and Mimi Bannister. Eight players tied for third place on 116 strokes.

These were the team of Harold Stutzen, Lou Zinn, Solly Friedman and Eli Gitlin and the foursome of Jacob Deutsch, Yair Kena, Amos Amir and Moshe Zarkover.

Coming up on May 29, 30 and June 3-6 are the club championships.

Tennis: After eight matches in the league, Hapoel Ironi Lod A is leading with 23 points but Ironi Ramle is just one point behind and has a game in hand. In third place is ASA Tel Aviv with 21 and Elitzur Kochav Yair fills the fourth spot.

Among the weekend's matches were Ironi Ramle's 4-0 triumph over ASA Tel Aviv with Eyal Erlich, Noam Behr and Amir Hadad featuring for the victors.

This week's ATP Tour rankings show Eyal Ran at 139 (160 in doubles), Oren Motswassel at 187, Erlich at 207, Raviv Weidenfeld at 242 and Nir Welgren at 277.

Cycling: The whole family is invited to a five-kilometer cycle tomorrow to mark the international sports day celebrations.

Meet in Jerusalem at Yeshua Yevin 17, Nayot, to meander through the Valley of the Cross, Gan Sacher, the Israel Museum and back. Pedalling-off time is 5 p.m. Entry free.

Maccabiah minutes: The darling of the Atlanta Games, gymnast Kerry Strug, will carry the flame at the opening ceremony of the Maccabiah on July 14. Strug, who crept into people's hearts the world over when she led the American team to gold despite her injury, is unlikely to compete here but will give a demonstration.

In other news, the Youth Maccabiah has attracted 800 entrants, the largest number ever, and almost twice the number from the previous games.

The main youth attraction is expected to be netball. In all, the athletes will compete in ten disciplines with the action mostly in Zichron Ya'acov, Yokneam and the Wingate Institute.

Frost wins by two strokes as Tiger shows he's also human

FORT WORTH, TX (Reuters) - David Frost of South Africa won for the first time in nearly three years on the Tiger Woods victory parade faltered as the expected Colonial golf tournament.

Frost shot a three-under-par 67 for a four-round total of 15-under 265, then sweated it out in the clubhouse as first David Ogren, then Woods failed to catch him. It was the 10th career victory for Frost, who had been struggling this year and missed the cut at five of the nine tournaments he played.

Woods, gunning for his third successive win, fell into a fourth-place tie.

"I didn't play well all day," Woods said in a prepared statement released through tournament officials.

Overlooked and unheralded when the days started, Frost said he enjoyed playing ahead of the woods and away from most of the crowds. "I couldn't ask for a better situation myself, that's just the way I wanted it," Frost said. Frost finished in the top 20 only once this year and wasn't even among the top 150 on the 1997 money list before capturing the $288,000 top prize.

BT Ban June Free TT with lend agr 3.1% TT Con 0.7% incr -1 basis said. Se acco The emm 7%-1 econ- pare. In suppli with there expt in 1 to m budg ment be hi tic pr de cre The cours 2001 Coop count avera "Ac Zi Zin Ltd. s quart millic of $2 year. Rev $336. The result Or IN Don't or] Name Addr Credit Exp. d Tel Nc e-mail

CLASSIFIEDS

RATES

PRICES ARE AS FOLLOWS - All rates include VAT: Single Weekday - NIS 128.70 for 10 words (minimum), each additional word NIS 12.87. FRIDAY AND HOLIDAY EVE - NIS 188.50 for 10 words (minimum), each additional word NIS 18.85. MONDAY, WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY (package) - NIS 292.50 for 10 words (minimum), each additional word - NIS 29.25. WEEK RATE (8 insertions) - NIS 409.50 for 10 words (minimum), each additional word - NIS 40.95. FOUR FRIDAYS (package) - NIS 528.50 for 10 words (minimum), each additional word - NIS 52.85. MONTHLY (24 insertions) - NIS 994.50 for 10 words (minimum), each additional word - NIS 99.45. Rates are valid until MAY 30 1997.

DEADLINES offices: Jerusalem - weekdays 12 noon the day before publication; for Friday 4 p.m. on Thursday. Tel Aviv and Haifa - weekdays: 12 noon, 2 days before publication; for Friday and Sunday: 4 p.m. Thursday in Tel Aviv and 12 noon Thursday in Haifa. For telephone enquiries please call 02-5319844.

DWELLINGS

General WHERE TO STAY THE JERUSALEM INN at the city Center - double or large family rooms, private bathroom, T.V., telephone, quality furnished. Tel. 02-625-2757, Fax: 02-625-1297. JERUSALEM LODGES LTD. Short and long term rentals. Bed and breakfast. P.O. Box 4233, Jerusalem 91044. Tel. 02-5611745, Fax: 02-561-8541.

DWELLINGS

Jerusalem Area RENTALS GERMAN COLONY, UNIQUE, 3 or 4, garden, basement, parking, long term, immediate. (No commission). DIVIROLLI SIANI. Tel. 02-623-6585.

SALES

GERMAN COLONY, LARGE, unique 2.3 or 4. Basement, garden, immediate (no commission). DIVIROLLI SIANI. Tel. 02-581-2424.

DWELLINGS

Tel Aviv HOLIDAY RENTALS BEAUTIFUL STUDIO AND 2 room apartments, Ben Gurion Blvd., tourists / businessmen, short / long term. Tel. 03-696-9092, 050-368872.

RENTALS

TEL AVIV, HOLIDAY apartment. Sea view, furnished, elevator, parking. Tel. 050-340-785.

DWELLINGS

General LUXURIOUS!! PENTHOUSES + apartments, furnished + unfurnished!!! For short/long. Tel. 03-605-5704, Fax: 03-605-0075.

SALES

EZOREI CHEN, LUXURIOUS, 5 + balcony, + seawiew, high floor, Yael REALTOR (MALDAM). Tel. (03) 642-6253.

DWELLINGS

Sharon Area SALES/RENTALS HERZLIYA PITUAM, HOUSE for sale/rent, 1/2 dunam, wonderful place. Attractive price. Tel. 050-231-725.

CAESAREA, LUXURIOUS HOUSE + pool, air conditioning, Opposite sea. Wonderful place. Tel. 050-231-725.

SITUATIONS VACANT

Tel Aviv HOUSEHOLD HELP SOUTH AFRICAN AU PAIR AGENCY Israeli based, requires many South African live-in au pairs countryside. Top conditions + high salary. Wonderful job opportunities. 03-919-0423.

IMMEDIATE JOBS AVAILABLE

friendly families, best conditions, the agency with a heart for the Au Pairs. Call Hillman. Tel. (03) 955-9537.

GENEROUS ENGLISH FAMILY seeks

South African au pair, live-in, central Tel Aviv, $760 + NIS 200 immediate bonus. Tel. 052-452002.

METAPLET, PLEASANT FAMILY, high salary. Live-in / live-out. Good conditions. Tel. 03-537-1038.

SITUATIONS VACANT

Sharon Area HOUSEHOLD HELP SEEKING HOUSEHOLD HELP, Herzliya, Sun-Thurs, total 10 hrs. Tel. 052-564525.

PURCHASE/SALES

General FOR SALE AIWA MULTISYSTEM TV + VCR, NIS2200, Gene - Tel. 04-926-2328.

VEHICLES

Jerusalem UNRESTRICTED ARIE PALOGE - QUALITY CARS: buying, selling, leasing, trading. Tel. 02-6525735, 050-240877.

CRITIC'S CHOICE

THEATER

HELEN KAYE

Yehoshua Sobol's plays are uncomfortably prophetic. They talk about the aspects of our lives here we'd really much rather not look at...

Mezzo-soprano Isabelle Ganz presents a program of theater-related music tomorrow in Jerusalem.

The riotous Cameri production of Shakespeare's A Comedy of Errors returns to the main stage. Director Omri Nitzan puts both sets of twins in 1980s Beirut...

also air a new four-part award-winning documentary series by the BBC, Churchill, at 11:15. The program, which was written by Martin Gilbert...

CLASSICAL MUSIC

MICHAEL AJZENSTADT

Mezzo-soprano Isabelle Ganz presents All the World's a Stage, a program of theater-related music by composers such as Kurt Weill, Stephen Sondheim, George Gershwin, Leonard Bernstein...

Also tomorrow, at the same time, at the Jaffa Music Center, the Ramat Hasharon Camerata Orchestra performs music by Corelli, Janacek, Bartok, Dvorak, Elgar and Johann Strauss.

TELEVISION

ELANA CHIPMAN

Channel 3 (33) will resume live broadcasts of Knesset sessions this week. Tonight, Channel 33 will

FILM

ADINA HOFFMAN

* BLOOD & WINE - One of the most exquisitely mixed-up pictures of the last several years, the latest collaboration between director Bob (Five Easy Pieces) Rafelson and actor Jack Nicholson...

TV

CHANNEL 1
6:30 News flash
6:31 News in Arabic
6:45 Exercise Time
7:00 Good Morning Israel

EDUCATIONAL TV
9:00 In Open Air - the Impressionists
9:30 Art Workshop
9:00 Health
9:45 For the very young

MIDDLE EAST TV
7:00 TV Shop
7:00 700 Club
15:00 The Moomins
15:30 Dennis the Menace

CHANNEL 1
15:30 Motormice from Mars
15:55 Body
18:00 It's Alive
18:25 Yehoshua Sobol

ARABIC PROGRAMS
18:30 Apropro
19:00 News
17:00 Man and Nature

CHANNEL 2
6:15 Today's Programs
6:30 Little Rosie
7:00 Coffee with Tel-Ad

JORDAN TV
15:30 Holy Koran
15:35 French programs

PRIME TIME TV

Table with 8 columns and 8 rows showing TV programs for Prime Time TV. Columns are numbered 1-8, and rows are numbered 1-8.

9:00 Big City Metro: Toronto (pt)
9:30 Francisco Aniza sings Schubert's Winterreise
11:00 The Catherine Wheel

7:30 GI Joe
8:30 Fast as the Cat
8:30 Oprah Winfrey
8:30 The X-Files

11:30 Cricket Week
12:30 Trans World Sport
13:00 English Cricket: B&H Cup quarter final

6:00 Bodies in Motion
16:00 Bodies in Motion
16:30 NBA Eastern Playoffs (pt)

6:00 Travel Xpress
6:30 VIP
6:30 The Ticket
7:30 NBC News

9:30 Rhythmic Gymnastics: European Championship, Greece
11:00 Touring Car World Series

6:00 Holy Koran
6:30 World Report
7:30 Insight

3:30 English Cricket: Worcestershire vs. Australia
10:30 Golf: Inside PGA Tour

6:00 Star Plus
6:30 Nine to Five
7:00 Yan Can Cook

6:00 Star Plus
6:30 Nine to Five
7:00 Yan Can Cook

6:00 Star Plus
6:30 Nine to Five
7:00 Yan Can Cook

6:00 Star Plus
6:30 Nine to Five
7:00 Yan Can Cook

6:00 Star Plus
6:30 Nine to Five
7:00 Yan Can Cook

6:00 Star Plus
6:30 Nine to Five
7:00 Yan Can Cook

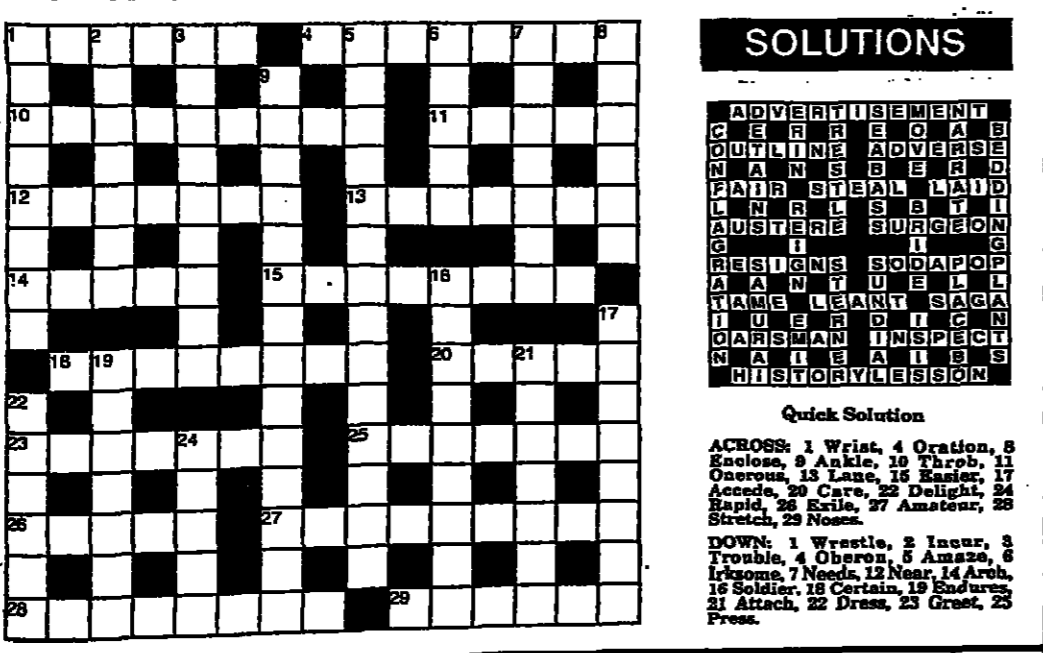

6:00 Star Plus
6:30 Nine to Five
7:00 Yan Can Cook

6:00 Star Plus
6:30 Nine to Five
7:00 Yan Can Cook

CRYPTIC CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1 Weekend drinks container with rings round it (6)
4 I lost a switch, gold switch (8)
10 Obstinately slow line of traffic? (4,5)
11 Ray's a character in Greece (5)
12 There is no duty on model tool, no cost either (3-4)
13 Plucky instrumentalist? (7)
14 Agencies that inform me returning assistance (5)
15 Being about to get the lot back - it's stupefying (8)
18 Ships I'll float round (8)
20 Right of ownership a peer has (5)
23 Order a player to take no further part in the going-away party (4-3)

QUICK CROSSWORD
ACROSS
1 Cloth stainer (4)
4 Narrow passages (7)
8 Entreated (8)
9 Young scout (3)
11 Confusion (6)
13 Unfair (6)
14 Swoon (5)
15 Colour (of a horse) (4)
17 Shut in (4)
18 Monastic head (5)
20 Yellow fruit (6)
21 Sticky sweet (6)
24 Purchase (3)
25 Atalier (8)
26 Quite old (7)
27 Unwilling (4)

MOVIES

JERUSALEM CINEMATHEQUE
Voyager 5 - Mr. Reliable 7:15, 100 Years of the Hollywood Western 7:15, Forgotten 1918 9:30, Little Caesar 10:15, GIL Jerusalem Mall (Maha) = 6788448

In light of bribery scandal: Ministry orders new driving tests

By Jerusalem Post Staff

All drivers who took lessons from driving teachers suspected of bribing Transport Ministry examiners in the North will be required to retake their driving tests, the ministry announced.

A ministry spokesman yesterday put the number at "between hundreds and thousands." Israel Radio reported that the ministry would only track the drivers back two years, even though the scam has apparently been going on for nearly six years. Transport Minister Yitzhak Levy on Sunday announced the suspension of all driving examiners arrested in the case.

There were two more arrests in the massive fraud case yesterday: the supervisor of driving examiners in the North, a Haifa driving school, also a resident, 42. Police said investigators yesterday searched another driving school premises in the city. As a result of the fraud case, the ministry plans to introduce a new system for licensing new drivers, whereby only those who have already passed the theory part of the driving test and a physical examination will be allowed to take driving lessons.

Individuals will have to be 17 or over to take lessons, and driving tests will be administered by private companies. Examiners currently working for the Transport Ministry will be eligible to apply for work with the private companies when their personal contracts with the ministry expire.

New drivers will receive a temporary license good for six months, after which they will have to take a "refresher course." In addition, during the first six months a new driver has a license, he or she will have to drive with an experienced driver in the car.

Police arrest one of the Union of Local Authorities protesters who blocked the road outside the Prime Minister's Office yesterday. (Brian Hender)

Beilin announces formation of 'shadow cabinet'

By SARAH HONIG

A week before the June 3 Labor leadership primary, candidate MK Yossi Beilin yesterday announced the formation of a shadow cabinet, assuming he wins.

So far, if the polls are to be trusted, MK Ehud Barak is way out front, with Beilin in second place and MKs Ephraim Sneh and Shlomo Ben-Ami barely in the race.

The pollsters' predictions notwithstanding, Beilin's announcement of a shadow cabinet also defied custom, in that shadow governments were always avoided to prevent vicious internecine prestige battles over non-existent posts.

Evincing magnanimity towards Barak, Beilin put him in the Defense Ministry, while giving old buddy Haim Ramon Foreign Affairs. Uzi Baran, now Barak's second in command, will get the Treasury if Beilin wins, while Shlomo Ben-Ami can count on the Education portfolio. Beilin also pledged to appoint an Arab minister and said his cabinet would include two women.

However, none of the "appointments" is firm, because Beilin announced that patron Shimon Peres can have the pick of the portfolios, regardless of whose expense. Peres still has not let it be known who he endorses, if anyone.

Barak quipped that, "Yossi's offer is very generous, but I am afraid my chances of receiving this appointment from him are as slim as his chances are to win the primary."

Histadrut calls off mass strike

By DAVID HARRIS and Tim

After less than 24 hours, the Histadrut yesterday called off its strike in local authorities throughout the country.

While a court order prevented strike action in 14 cities, including Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, and Haifa, all local authority services were affected in the remaining 250 councils.

The strike came to an end when Histadrut campaign head Leon Morozovsky and Union of Local Authorities chairman Adi Eldar signed an agreement whereby the ULA undertakes not to reduce employee wages, despite the mounting debts of local authorities.

At the same time, the Histadrut said it is in full support of the ULA cause.

Meanwhile, there were clashes between the police and ULA leaders, as the ULA strike enters its third week.

ULA representatives attempted to break into both the Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's Office and that of Finance Minister Dan Meridor, as the two held talks with Interior Minister Eli Snissin in an attempt to find a compromise with the ULA.

Jerusalem deputy police chief Dep.-Cmdr. Mickey Levy ordered the ULA representatives arrested. As police tried to drive them to the station, however, other ULA protesters blocked the car with their bodies and clashes broke out. Several ULA protesters were struck, pushed, and curbed by policemen. Eldar was taken to Hadassah-University Hospital, Ein Kerem, for examination after being hit by a policeman.

Eldar said that the police were responsible for the clashes and said the ULA would lodge a complaint against Levy, who, he said, personally struck protesters and verbally abused them.

The ULA is demanding the Treasury wipe out local authority deficits, which amount to NIS 4 billion.

"Nothing new was offered, so we're carrying on our strike in 250 of the 264 local authorities," said ULA spokesman Hilkil Goldstein.

On Sunday night, Prime Minister's Office Director-

General Avigdor Lieberman proposed giving the municipalities NIS 300 million this year and NIS 500m. in 1998, NIS 200m. of which would be given as a loan this year.

There will be no council services in the 250 municipalities, with the exception of education, refuse collection, and emergency services.

The 600 public sector psychologists also on strike reported that a little progress was made in their negotiations with the Treasury, Civil Service Commission, and Kupat Holim Clalit.

Three psychologists were arrested during protests at the universities in the major cities, after they interfered with traffic.

WEATHER

Haifa 19-26	Tiberias 19-27
Afula 17-23	Samartha 19-27
Tel Aviv 18-26	Jerusalem 17-26
Bnei Brak 17-26	Dead Sea 17-26
Eilat 26-39

Forecast: Pleasant

AROUND THE WORLD

	LOW	HIGH	WIND	SEA
Amsterdam	60	66	12	cloudy
Berlin	62	61	17	cloudy
Buenos Aires	61	64	14	clear
Caracas	81	84	14	clear
Chicago	61	65	29	clear
Copenhagen	64	68	15	cloudy
Frankfurt	65	67	15	cloudy
Geneva	61	67	23	cloudy
Helsinki	61	67	23	cloudy
Hong Kong	23	27	78	clear
Los Angeles	61	65	16	clear
London	66	63	16	cloudy
Madrid	68	64	17	clear
Mexico	64	67	27	clear
Moscow	61	67	14	clear
Mumbai	82	88	17	clear
New York	68	81	26	clear
Paris	68	61	26	clear
Rome	68	65	25	clear
Stockholm	64	68	14	clear
Sydney	65	69	20	clear
Taipei	65	69	24	clear
Toronto	65	69	20	clear
Yokohama	65	69	20	clear
Zurich	65	68	20	cloudy

Winning cards

In yesterday's daily Chance drawings, the winning cards were the king of spades, ace of hearts, 8 of diamonds, and 8 of clubs, and the ace of spades, king of hearts, 10 of diamonds, and jack of clubs.

Burglary takes Virtual Jerusalem offline

By JUDY SIEGEL

Computer companies fight a never-ending battle against viruses, software pirates, and industrial espionage. But sometimes they are knocked for a loop by ordinary burglars.

Virtual Jerusalem, a major Israeli Internet site that is the home base for hundreds of companies and organizations offering information, found itself virtually speechless when thieves in New York stole its computer servers over the weekend.

Coming a few days before the company's first anniversary and gearing up for the marking of Jerusalem Day, the burglary caused much work both in Jerusalem's Talpiot section and New York to restore the information on the site. It had closed down for a few days and informed would-be users that it was having "temporary technical difficulties."

"Our computer equipment, some pieces worth as much as $20,000, was stolen from an office we share with one or two companies in Nanuet, near Monsey, New York," commented David Kahn, a Virtual Jerusalem vice president. "We have backup, but it takes time to put it back together."

Kahn dismissed the idea that the break-in was the work of industrial spies, as the hardware and software of the firm's office mates were also hauled away.

Smoking to be banned on many El Al, Arkia, Sun D'Or flights

By JUDY SIEGEL

Transport Minister Yitzhak Levy yesterday announced his intention to bar smoking on Israeli airline flights up to five hours long, as a year-long experiment.

He has asked El Al, Arkia, and the charter-flight subsidiary Sun D'Or to present detailed plans for gradual limitation and then halting of smoking on commercial flights. Smoking is now barred on flights up to two hours long.

Levy's action came a few days before the deadline set by the High Court of Justice, which last year heard a suit by El Al stewards and a frequent passenger demanding the end to on-board smoking.

The plaintiffs argued that air inside aircraft is merely recycled and not cleansed, and that no-smoking sections do not prevent contaminated air from smoking sections from reaching them. The stewards argued that their health was endangered by constant exposure to tobacco smoke, forcing them to choose between working and good health.

The court had instructed the transport minister to set up a committee of experts to examine the question. It heard testimony in favor of a smoking prohibition from the Israel Cancer Association, the Israel Society for the Prevention of Smoking, and the Health and Environment ministries, and against from the airlines and the Dubek tobacco company.

Last year, the International Civil Aviation Organization passed a resolution calling on member nations to bar smoking on all commercial flights entering or leaving their country. So far, Canada and Australia have carried it out.

Levy said that if, within three months, the three firms do not present detailed plans to him, he will consider the unilateral establishment of new regulations to bar smoking on their flights.

Levy instructed Civil Aviation Administration director Menahem Sharon to work towards the signing of mutual agreements of understanding to neutralize the factor in competition and profits that would allow foreign companies to benefit by not abiding by regulations affecting local airlines.

El Al spokesman Nahman Kleiman said it would use the three months to consider the decision and present its views to Levy.

"We will say that prohibiting smoking on our flights could harm our marketing efforts, and some determined smokers could patronize other airlines because of a smoking ban on El Al," he said, adding that it would be easier if all airlines flying to Israel prohibited smoking.

ZEV EIZIK PRODUCTION LTD

PARTY CELEBRATING 30 YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF 'SGT. PEPPER' FEATURING THE BEATLES

THE BAND THAT SUPPORTED "OASIS" THE MAGIC OF THE BEATLES FROM "SHE LOVES YOU" TILL "LET IT BE" SPECTACULARLY RE-CREATED

THURSDAY, 29.5.97 AT 9:30 P.M. HANGAR 11, OLD PORT OF TEL-AVIV

TICKETS: 03-5276677, 02-6250905, 04-8384777.

BOBBY AND HIS BAND McFFERIN

WITH THE ISRAEL PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA

THURSDAY 5.6.97 11:00 P.M. HANGAR 11 OLD PORT OF TEL-AVIV

MON. 2.6 AT 8:30 P.M. TICKETS: 02-6240896, 02-6256889

HAIFA "AUDITORIUM" WED. 4.6 AT 8:30 P.M. TICKETS: 04-8662244, 04-8388011

ZEV EIZIK PRODUCTION LTD

suede

HANGAR 11, OLD PORT OF TEL-AVIV. ADDITIONAL CONCERTS 5.6.97, 7.6.97

TICKETS: "HADRAN" TEL. 03-5279797 AND AT ALL OTHER AGENCIES www.hadran.co.il/suede

book department

BEAUTIFUL PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

From the hyssop to the mighty cedar, over 100 kinds of foliage mentioned in the Bible, photographed in color and described by Dr. David Darom. Softcover album, 47 pp. JP Price NIS 25

300 WILD FLOWERS OF ISRAEL

More than 140 colorful pages of 300 wild flowers, described and photographed in their native sites. Although not close to cataloging the entire range of wild flowers in this country, Azaria Alon does provide a wide sampling of Israel's flora. Conveniently indexed by color. Softcover, spiral bound, fits in a backpack. Published by SPNI. JP Price NIS 55

Books, The Jerusalem Post, POB 81, Jerusalem 91000

BEAUTIFUL PLANTS OF THE BIBLE at NIS 25 each

300 WILD FLOWER OF ISRAEL at NIS 55 each

BOTH TITLES for NIS 75

Postage in Israel: one copy NIS 6, two or more NIS 10

Total NIS _____

Enclosed check payable to The Jerusalem Post, or credit card details.

Please list gift recipient's name, address and message separately.

Visa Iso/MCD Diners AmEx

CC No. _____ Exp. _____

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ Code _____

Phone (day) _____ ID No. _____

Signature _____

book department

SYRIA AND ISRAEL

From War to Peace-making

Moshe Ma'oz examines the history of relations between Israel and Syria throughout the Middle Eastern conflict, demonstrating its crucial importance for the strategic posture of both countries, for the fate of the Palestinian problem, and for the prospects of an overall Middle East peace settlement. Published by Oxford University Press, 1995. Hardcover, 262 pp. JP Price NIS 149

Books, The Jerusalem Post, POB 81, Jerusalem 91000

Please send me _____ copies of:

SYRIA AND ISRAEL at NIS 149 each

Postage in Israel: one copy NIS 6, two or more NIS 10

Total NIS _____

Enclosed check payable to The Jerusalem Post, or credit card details.

Please list gift recipient's name, address and message separately.

Visa Iso/MCD Diners AmEx

CC No. _____ Exp. _____

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ Code _____

Phone (day) _____ ID No. _____

Signature _____

8
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19 20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
29
30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47
48
49
50
51
52
53
54
55
56
57
58
59
60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67
68
69
70
71
72
73
74
75
76
77
78
79
80
81
82
83
84
85
86
87
88
89
90
91
92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99
100